

Contents

Acknowledgements	xiii
Introduction	xv
I Some perspectives on teaching and learning	I
Schools, teachers, pupils	2
The school as an organization	2
The teacher's way of life in school	4
Some traditional roles of the teacher	5
Current and emerging roles of the teacher	6
Recent developments in the study of teaching	8
Children as learners	9
Teaching practice and its place in teacher education	11
The authors' views on teaching and teaching practice	14
Recent innovations in teacher education	16
Simulation	16
Interaction analysis	18
Microteaching	23
II Preparing and planning	25
The preliminary visit	27
The purpose of the preliminary visit	28
What to look for and what information to collect	28
Aims and objectives	37
Terminology	37
Some characteristics of aims	39
Two kinds of objectives: (1) behavioural and (2) non-behavioural	41
Some characteristics of behavioural objectives	43
The student teacher and behavioural objectives	47
Non-behavioural objectives	49

The debate surrounding the use of behavioural objectives	51
A reappraisal	52
Identifying and writing objectives	53
Conclusion: some suggestions	55
Schemes of work	56
What to include in a scheme of work	57
Sequencing	58
Two specimen schemes	59
The lesson note	61
The first step	63
Learning phases and instructional events	64
Application of learning phases/instructional events model to a class lesson	70
Two specimen lesson notes	74
Alternative lesson plans	85
Lesson plans — some related issues	92
Self appraisals	93
Organizing one's lesson note file	95

III Practising teaching 97

Teaching strategies and learning styles	98
Social structure and interaction in learning situations	98
Chronological, vertical, and transitional grouping	104
Open education	109
Team teaching	112
Mixed ability grouping	117
Topic work	119
Project work	122
Observing others teach	123
The classroom environment	128
The physical environment	129
The emotional environment	135
Some points of general relevance to the management of learning	139
Making rules	142
Issuing orders and instructions	144
Classroom friendship patterns: the techniques of sociometry	146
Some situational factors	148
The learning process	148
Harnessing motivation	153

Modelling	159
Teachers' attitudes and expectations and the influence they exert on classroom behaviour	162
Questions and questioning	163
Some relevant research findings	172
Control and discipline	175
Suggestions for handling minor misbehaviour problems	176
Dealing with repeated minor misbehaviour	178
Dealing with persistent disruptive misbehaviour	179
The ripple effect	181
Punishment	182
Behaviour modification	186
Supportive relationships	189
Out-of-school activities	191
Organizing out-of-school visits with safety in mind	192
Travel arrangements and out-of-school activities	192
Day and half-day activities	193
Industrial and work visits	194
Professional responsibilities	194
Accidents	195

IV Evaluation, assessment, and record keeping

197

A model of the evaluation process	198
Gathering information by means of questioning	200
Gathering information by means of objective tests	203
Item analysis	207
Gathering information by means of standardized tests	213
Gathering information by means of essays	214
Forms of assessment	215
Record keeping	216
Various methods of record keeping	217
Oral assessment	221
Assessing pupils' practical work	221
Project work and its assessment	222
Some problems of assessment	225

Postscript	227
-------------------	-----

Appendix I

Resource materials and technical aids	229
---------------------------------------	-----

Appendix 2
Useful information and sources		237
Appendix 3
Some references and addresses in connection with audio-visual aids and materials		241
Appendix 4
Some addresses of publishers of children's literature		242
Appendix 5
Terms used in educational measurement		243
Appendix 6
Specimen work cards		246
Appendix 7
Recommended reading		249
References		250
Index		259