

Contents

I.—INTRODUCTION	pp. 3-7
Teaching constantly changes	3
It covers many different subjects in school and college	3
It is widely practised by ordinary people in daily life	4
It is difficult and important	6
This book is an outline of its methods, not of its subjects	6
II.—THE TEACHER	8-65
His rewards and his difficulties	8-11
The qualities of a good teacher	11-57
Knowing the subject, 11—Liking the subject, 17—Liking the pupils, 24 ; bad schools and bad classes, 27—Knowing the pupils, 33 ; youngsters, 33 ; individuals and types, 37 ; eccentrics, 41—Knowing other things, 48 ; humour, 53
The abilities of a good teacher	57-65
Memory, 57—Will-power, 59—Kindness, 63
III.—THE TEACHER'S METHODS	66-152
Preparation	66-86
Planning, 66—Renewal of material, 80
Communication	86-145
The three methods, 88—Lecturing, 89-107 ; delivery, 89 ; notes and their use, 97 ; punctuation, 102—Tutoring, 107-116 ; invention and purpose, 107 ; difficulty, 108 ; value, 109 ; methods described, 111—Classroom work, 116-45 ; examinations, 118 ; questions and discussion, 124 ; competition, 129 ; the uses of tradition, 132 ; punishment, 141

Fixing the impression	pp. 145-52
Revision, 147—Questions, 148—Statement of outstanding problems, 150

IV.—GREAT TEACHERS AND THEIR PUPILS 153-231

The sophists	153
Socrates	155
Plato	157
Aristotle and Alexander	162
Jesus	167
Good teachers and bad pupils	175
Good schools and bad products, 179—Good fathers and bad sons, 180—An explanation and some remedies, 183
Renaissance teachers	188
The Jesuit teachers	193
Teachers of the nineteenth and early twentieth centuries	197
Fathers of great men	220
Professional men, 223—Amateurs, 226

V.—TEACHING IN EVERYDAY LIFE 232-248

Fathers and mothers	232
Husbands and wives	234
Managers	235
Doctors	235
Psychiatrists	236
Clergymen and priests	237
Advertisers, publicists, propagandists	238
Communist education of prisoners, 240
Authors and artists	242
Principles of everyday teaching	246

NOTES	249
-------	-----

INDEX	259
-------	-----