

CONTENTS

Preface .....	xi
---------------	----

VOLUME I

Introduction .....	3
1. The dialogical approach .....	6
2. Public-sphere figurations .....	17
3. The Investiture Contest as a historiographical problem ....	22
Quantity, type and literary genre .....	22
The manuscript tradition .....	29
‘Stand der Forschung’: neglected areas and new departures .....	32
Chapter One Structural changes in the public sphere during the Investiture Contest .....	45
Introduction .....	45
1. The public culture of the early period (1030–1073) .....	48
The Carolingian and Ottonian departure .....	50
The early-period polemicists’ view of public opinion .....	57
The function of public opinion in the struggle against anti-pope Cadalus .....	64
Public culture in perspective: popular and intellectual movements .....	68
2. Structural changes in the public sphere: the mid-period polemics .....	73
Public opinion according to the royal and papal chanceries .....	75
Polemical appeals to public opinion in the 1070s and 1080s .....	77
The period of transition in the 1090s .....	88
Public opinion according to the schismatic cardinals .....	92
3. Political-theoretical tracts and polemical poems in the late-period literature .....	99

Official letters, polemical treatises and public opinion .....	100
Polemical poems and Bruno of Segni's campaign .....	104
4. Public-sphere formation in the case of Pseudo-Udalric .....	109
Conclusion .....	117
Chapter Two The early-period polemics and public-sphere formation: the De ordinando pontifice .....
Introduction .....	121
1. Justifying the polemical endeavour .....	128
2. Radicalising the criticism .....	132
3. The case of Pope Benedict IX .....	136
4. The moral-philosophical argument .....	140
5. Simony, moral theology and canon law .....	142
6. The case of Pope Gregory VI .....	147
7. Popularising the criticism .....	149
8. The episcopal tendency .....	150
9. The relationship between regnum and sacerdotium .....	157
10. The polemical encounter .....	164
11. The relationship between the sacerdotal and the secular hierarchies .....	167
Conclusion .....	169
Chapter Three Polemical warfare in the papal and royal chanceries (1073–1082) .....
Introduction .....	173
1. Quantitative overview of distribution patterns .....	178
2. The first phase: colloquium secretum .....	188
The first encounter (1073–1075) .....	189
The polemical letter to King Henry IV (December 1075) .....	192
Spreading the reform message in Constance .....	198
3. The second phase: the propagandistic confrontation (1076) .....	201
Discourse in letter 12 .....	202
Discourse in letter 13 .....	208
Shattering the elitist public sphere .....	215
The papal response: the first polemical letter to Hermann of Metz .....	220

The propaganda campaign aimed at the German people .....	228
4. The third phase: the establishment of the semi-institutionalised public sphere .....	243
The struggle in Ravenna .....	245
The second polemic letter to Hermann of Metz .....	249
The royal answer .....	268
Conclusion .....	275
Chapter Four Gebhard, Wenrich, Manegold, and Guido debating the papal letter to Hermann of Metz .....	281
Introduction .....	281
1. Introduction: setting the communicative terms .....	286
2. The excommunication .....	293
3. Wenrich of Trier's approach to the excommunication .....	297
4. The excommunication and the power to bind and to loose .....	300
5. The power to bind and loose in canon law .....	304
6. 'Proceedings from history' and public opinion .....	308
7. The canon-law legitimacy of anti-pope Guibert of Ravenna .....	311
8. The oath: contextualising the oath .....	321
9. The moral-theological approach to the oath .....	323
10. The oath, perjury, and the 'royal bishops' .....	329
11. The release of the oath according to Wenrich .....	334
12. Guido of Osnabrück's approach to the oath .....	342
13. Conclusio : polemical targets and the question of audiences .....	344

VOLUME II

Chapter Five Peter Crassus and the legal renaissance of the eleventh century (c. 1080–1084) .....	349
Introduction .....	349
1. The legal renaissance of the eleventh century .....	352
2. The Defensio : the literary structure and the introduction .....	359
3. Peter Crassus' conception of rationality .....	362

4. The dialogical moment: the Pataria .....	367
5. The legal 'right order' according to Crassus .....	370
6. The private side of Hildebrand's behaviour .....	374
7. The dialogical moment: the Saxons .....	379
The formal legal scheme: Crassus' conception of legal authority .....	381
The Roman-law defence of King Henry .....	385
The Roman orientation of Crassus .....	389
8. The dialogical moment: the judges .....	393
The formal framework: a 'just trial' .....	393
The discussion of the oath and the propagandistic zeal of Crassus .....	398
Convicting the Saxons .....	403
Conclusion .....	405
9. The reception of Roman law in the polemical literature .....	409
The use of references to Roman law in the early period .....	411
The mid-period: Crassus in perspective .....	413
Roman law among the late-period polemical writers .....	416
Conclusion .....	420
 Chapter Six The 'right order of the world' according to the Liber de unitate ecclesiae conservanda .....
Introduction .....	423
The first book .....	432
1. The prologue .....	432
2. The first historical argument: Carolingian history .....	434
3. The question of the power to bind and to loose .....	442
4. The first legal argument related to the excommunication .....	450
5. The second historical argument: the excommunication of Emperor Theodosius .....	454
6. The third historical argument: the excommunication of Emperor Arcadius .....	459
7. The second legal argument: the functional hierarchy .....	468
8. The release of the oath .....	471
Conclusion to the first book .....	478
The second book .....	480

9. Introducing the intellectual opponents: Pope Hildebrand and the Hirshauer monk .....	480
10. The first dispute with the Hirshauer monk .....	483
11. The election of anti-pope Guibert of Ravenna .....	488
12. Anti-king Rudolf, Pope Hildebrand, and the definition of the papal party .....	493
13. The textual and intellectual aspect of the 'right order' .....	496
14. The fifth historical argument .....	504
15. History and narration of contemporary events: the 1080s .....	507
16. The Gerstungen incident (1085) .....	509
17. Post-Gerstungen: history and narration of contemporary events .....	522
18. The dispute with Bernard of Hildesheim .....	528
19. The final encounter with the Hirshauer monk .....	534
20. The conception of rationality according to the Hersfeld monk .....	541
Conclusion .....	548
Chapter Seven The political-theoretical orientation of the late period: De investitura episcoporum (1109) .....	551
Introduction .....	551
1. The Roman renovatio : the legal argument .....	555
2. Linking theory and practice: the historical argument ....	560
3. 'Papal infallibility': the moral-theological argument .....	567
4. The polemical encounter .....	573
5. Investiture as a royal tradition: the custom argument ....	574
6. The caput populi argument .....	578
7. The functional hierarchies .....	585
8. Contemporary history addressed .....	592
Conclusion .....	599
Chapter Eight The public debate on the investiture question (1058–1122) .....	603
Introduction .....	603
1. The early- and mid-period discussion .....	604
2. The political-theoretical orientation of the late-period polemics .....	613
The royalist initiative, 1103–1111 .....	615

3. The new papal spur: the privilege of 1111 and its aftermath .....	621
Approaching the concordat of Worms (1112–1122) .....	633
Conclusion .....	640
Conclusion .....	643
1. The structural changes in the public sphere during the Investiture Contest .....	643
2. Discourse in the polemical literature .....	647
3. The Investiture debate in perspective .....	654
4. The medieval public sphere .....	656
Bibliography .....	661
Index
Index of Names .....	737
Index of Subjects .....	757