

Contents

List of Tables and Figures	vii
Introduction	xi
1 An Overview of Assessment ROBIN LLOYD-JONES	1
Why assess?	2
Formative or summative?
Comparisons and standards
Information for decision-making
Assessment within the Context of Educational Aims and Philosophy	5
Trends in assessment
The need for a whole-school policy
The plan of the book	8
Part I: Key concepts in assessments
Part II: Some assessment techniques
Part III: Assessment strategies
Some of the main themes of this book	12
The limitations of assessment	12
PART I KEY CONCEPTS IN ASSESSMENT
2 Fitness for Purpose ELIZABETH BRAY	17
Modes and techniques	17
A choice of modes	18
Formal or informal?
Final or continuous?
Formative or summative?
Internal or external?
Process or product?

Convergent or divergent?
Competitive or non-competitive?
Summary: modes and techniques
A choice of media	25
Pupil performance: a choice of media
Communicating assessment
A choice of frames of reference	30
The purpose of traditional examinations
Norm-referencing and examinations
The case against traditional examinations
Criterion-referenced assessment
Summary: frames of reference
3 Validity and Reliability RUTH CURRIE	35
What is validity?	35
Curricular validity
Construct validity
Criterion-related validity
Retrospective and predictive validity
Content validity
Reliability
Summary	39

PART III / SOME ASSESSMENT TECHNIQUES

4 Objective Testing RUTH CURRIE	47
What are objective tests?	47
Simple recall
Multiple choice	51
True/false	52
Matching block	54
Multiple completion
Sentence or paragraph completion
Advantages and disadvantages of objective tests
Writing objective tests
Conclusion
5 Written Responses: essays, guided responses, structured questions ELIZABETH BRAY	55
The choice of assignments	55

Written responses within an assessment strategy	59
Thinking skills
Language skills
Technical competence and 'fitness for purpose'
Structured questions	65
Advantages and disadvantages
Writing structured questions
Interpretation/comprehension exercises
Extended writing: essays and guided responses	69
Formative assessment
Assessment for differentiation
Validity and reliability
Conclusion	73
6 The Assessment of Projects and Extended Assignments
GEORGE JOHNSON	75
Formative assessment	76
Assessment of strategies
Group projects: peer- and self-assessment
Performance assessment	81
Assessment related to objectives	81
Key objectives
Practical skills
Interests, attitudes and values
Problems and issues	89
Summary	90

PART III ASSESSMENT STRATEGIES

7 Criterion-Referenced Assessment	GEORGE JOHNSON	95
Norm-referenced and criterion-referenced assessment		95
Using criterion-related assessment in mastery learning		98
Minimum competency
- Minimum competency as a threshold
- Minimum competency as an end-of-unit objective
Core objectives
Assessment of attainment based on criteria		107
Domain testing
Other approaches		111

Profiles
Individual learning objectives
Constructing and using criterion-referenced tests	113
Specifying the expected behaviour
Determining the level of competency you expect
Selecting the test items
Problems and advantages of criterion-referenced testing
Describing the results of the test
Conclusion
8 Examinations in Schools RUTH CURRIE	119
The place of examinations	119
Structuring examinations	121
Specification grids
Choice of techniques: validity and reliability
- Short-answer questions, structured questions and comprehension tests
- Extended writing
- Alternative approaches: open-book examinations and 'take aways'
Preparation of examinations: summary
Preparing pupils for examinations	127
Marking	132
Follow-up with pupils	136
Conclusion	137
9 Profiling ELIZABETH BRAY	141
Profiling in the classroom: formative assessment	143
Profiles and curriculum: a departmental approach	144
Problems with curriculum-led profiling
Pedagogy and profiling
Profile formats
Profiles and computers
Grid-profiles: an approach to assessment of basic and work-related skills	154
Profiling 'affective' outcomes	156
The formative use of pupil self-assessment	159
Profile assessment in personal, curricular and vocational guidance	163
Learning goals

Careers education and counselling	165
Profile reports for school-leavers	166
Profiles for external examinations	170
Has profiling a future?	172
Conclusion
10 Reports to Parents ELIZABETH BRAY	173
Traditional school reports: basic information	175
Weaknesses in traditional reports
What type of information?
Involvement and the need to know	178
The time factor
Involvement and the 'need to know'
But what about the time factor?
Involvement models of reports	180
Formative assessment in school reports
Developmental reports
Parental and student involvement
Function, timing and context	194
A schedule of staggered reports
The context of home-school communications
Future developments	196
The pattern of change
Profiled reports
New technology
Guidelines for change
Assessment, diagnosis, plan
Conclusion	205
References and Acknowledgements	207
Suggestions for Further Reading	211
Index	215