

CONTENTS

List of Figures	ix
Acknowledgments	xi
Introduction	1
1 Travel and Education in Roger Ascham's The Scholemaster (1570)	29
2 Travel and Prodigality in John Lyly's Euphues: The Anatomy of Wyt (1578) and Euphues and his England (1580)	57
3 The New Science and Travel Method	89
4 Textual Experience in Thomas Coryat's Crudities (1611): Reading, Writing, Traveling	123
5 Traveling through Texts: John Dunton's A Voyage Round the World (1691) and the Art of Digression	155
Postscript	187
Notes	197
Works Cited	215
Index	231

FIGURES

- | | | |
|-----|--|-----|
| 4.1 | Image of Thomas Coryat superimposed onto a print of the Great Tun at Heidelberg, from Coryat's Crudities (1611) | 138 |
| 4.2 | Picture of Coryat greeting a Venetian courtesan (misidentified as “Margarita Emiliana”) | 150 |
| 5.1 | The frontispiece to Coryat's Crudities (1611) | 159 |
| 5.2 | Frontispiece to John Dunton's Voyage Round the World (1691) | 160 |

Cover: Two travelers to Lake Averno, near Naples, printed in George Sandys, A Relation of a Journey, 2nd ed. (1621). The Sibyl's cave is to the left of the picture, and the ruins of Apollo's Temple is to the right. This is reproduced with the permission of the Brotherton Collection, Leeds University Library.