

Contents

LIST OF ILLUSTRATIONS	xv
PREFACE	xvii
I Foundations of European Education	I
Emergence of Europe	2
The Carolingian era A.D. 768-840	5
Rule of Charlemagne: concept of renovatio	5
Educational policy of Charlemagne: the schola palatina	8
Alcuin and the palace school	10
Encouragement of learning in the Frankish Empire	12
Manuscript preservation and the Caroline bookhand	15
Alcuin's final years at Tours: vision of imperium christianum	17
Two late Carolingian scholars: Hrabanus Maurus and John the Scot	18
Early feudal Europe A.D. 840-1050	24
Feudal society after Charlemagne	24
The pattern of learning: chivalric ideal of the nobility	25
The pattern of learning: clerics and clerks	27
Resurgence of monasticism: Cluniac Reform	27
Education of the secular clergy: emergence of cathedral schools	29

	Revival of the city: example of Venice	32
	Revival of trade and stimulation of learning	35
2	Era of the Cathedral Schools	37
	Eleventh-century revival in Europe	37
	The cathedral	40
	Organization of learning in the eleventh century	41
	The craft guilds	42
	The cathedral schools	44
	Controversy and conflict: the province of dialectic	47
	The monastics: Damian, Lanfranc and Anselm	47
	Peter Abelard and the Nominalist Controversy	49
	Abelard's contemporaries and the 'school' of Chartres	55
	Conservative reaction: Bernard of Clairvaux	58
	A systematic theory of education: Hugh of St Victor	60
	Hugh of St Victor: Didascalicon	61
	Hugh and the study of history	67
	The mnemonic approach to learning	68
	Towards a wider learning	72
3	An Age of Crisis 1150–1230	74
	Challenges to the church	74
	Church and state: disputes with Germany and England	76
	Educational ideals of the twelfth century	79
	Scholarly concern with social issues: John of Salisbury	79
	Educational ideal of eloquence	82
	Moslem Spain: speculation and controversy	87
	The recovery of Greek scholarship	87
	Kalam : Moslem application of reason to faith	90
	Moslem scholarship in Spain: thought of Averroes	93
	Maimonides and the defence of intellectual speculation	99
	Heresy in Europe	103
	Waldensian and Albigensian heresies 1170–1226	103
4	Emergence of the University	105
	Transition from cathedral schools	105
	University origins: Paris, Salerno, Bologna	107
	Paris: studium generale in the thirteenth century	110
	Growth of a corporate character	110
	Student organization: residential colleges	113

Student organization: the nations	114
Master's degree in arts: studies and methods	116
Master's degree in arts: admission to the guild	118
Higher studies: theology, law, medicine	120
The studium at Bologna	125
Origins of the studium : the study of law	125
Growth of a corporate character	128
Programme of studies at Bologna	132
5 Age of Scholasticism	138
Beginnings of controversy: dispute over Aristotle	138
The mendicant orders: Franciscans and Dominicans	139
The great controversy	143
Cosmological quest: background to conflict	143
Course of the controversy	145
Thomas Aquinas: scholastic synthesis	149
De magistro : Thomas's theory of education	152
Attack on reason: two condemnations, 1270 and 1277	155
Decline of scholastic debates	157
Franciscan reaction: Duns Scotus and William of Occam	157
End of papal ascendancy	158
Further revolt: John Wycliffe and the 'church of the elect'	161
Education in the later Middle Ages	163
A safe and middle way: Commendation of the Clerk	163
Growth of vernaculars and decline of Latin	166
Arresting the decline: Gerard Groote and the Brethren of the Common Life	172
6 Italy: Classical Revival of the Trecento	176
Intimations of change	176
Humana civilitas: the vision of Dante	178
Dante's education and life in Duecento Florence	178
Concern with the vernacular	181
Religious and secular sovereignty	183
The beatific vision	185
Petrarch and the Latin revival	188
Beginnings of antiquarianism	188
Recovery of the Latin past: the work of Petrarch	189
Moral discipline: Petrarch's attitude to education	194
Petrarch's mature years 1350-1374	198

	Extension of the classical revival: the first Greek phase	200
	Towards Greek studies: Giovanni Boccaccio	200
	Studio Fiorentino: Chrysoloras and the introduction of Greek	203
7	Italy: Humanism of the Quattrocento	207
	Civic humanism	207
	The issue of liberty: crisis in Florence	207
	European development by 1400	208
	Humanism and the Florentine appraisal of liberty	210
	Educational programme of humanism	212
	Vergerio on the education of the citizen	212
	Recovery of Quintilian's Institutio oratoria	218
	Early reactions to humanism	220
	Leonardo Bruni and the study of literature	221
	The studia humanitatis	224
	Vittorino da Feltre and the Casa Giocosa	225
	Guarino da Verona: changing emphasis in the humanist programme	228
8	Italy: Higher Learning in the Quattrocento	232
	Universities and academies	232
	Early Italian universities	232
	Emergence of the academies	234
	Marsilio Ficino and the Platonic Academy of Florence	237
	Application of Platonism to the arts	239
	Further developments in higher learning	241
	Decline of civic activity in Florence	241
	From civic humanist to courtier: Baldesar Castiglione	245
	Castiglione: on the education of women	248
	Castiglione and the education of princes	249
	Defence of Aristotle: Pietro Pomponazzi	251
	Development of printing and the Italian contribution	256
9	Expansion of Education and Humanism: I. France and Germany to 1500	260
	The north on the eve of educational change	260
	Education in France to 1500	262
	Maintenance of educational tradition	262
	Growth of French universities	264
	Introduction of humanism into France	267

Education in Germany to 1500	269
Medieval practices	269
University of Prague: foundation by the Emperor Charles	270
University of Prague: Jan Hus and religious conflict	273
The Bohemian Brethren	278
Foundation of further German universities	281
Humanist scholarship in Germany	283
Grammar schools in Germany	287
10 Expansion of Education and Humanism: II. England to 1500	291
The medieval background	291
Elementary and grammar schools: before the Conquest	291
Elementary and grammar schools: twelfth and thirteenth centuries	295
The two universities: Oxford and Cambridge	300
Other English studia : Northampton and Salisbury	307
The fourteenth century	310
Almonry and grammar schools	310
Education and learning: the literary evidence	312
The fifteenth century	320
Development of grammar schools	320
The use of physical punishment	323
Introduction of humanism: the new scholarship	326
11 Christian Humanism: I. Desiderius Erasmus and the Ideal of Piety	329
Erasmus of Rotterdam	330
Life and education to 1500	330
Early concern with education	331
On the Christian life	332
Education and the Christian way	335
Language and learning: the improvement of school texts	337
Ideas on education and government	340
Christian education and the way to peace	342
The role of scholarship in a troubled world	342
A programme of education	346
The programme implemented: Colet and St Paul's school	349
Erasmus and the Reformation in Germany	353

12	Christian Humanism: II. Martin Luther and the Reformation in Germany	355
	Humanism and the Reformation	355
	Luther and the Ninety-Five Theses	355
	Thought of Luther and Melanchthon	357
	Opposition to Luther from Erasmus	360
	Towards the establishment of schools	361
	Luther's Letter to the Councilmen of Germany	361
	Improving the schools in Saxony: the Visitation Articles	364
	Luther's sermon On Keeping Children in School	366
	Knowledge and the limits of reason	370
	The role of the schoolmaster	372
	Religious schism and church response	373
	Further schism from Rome: Switzerland	374
13	Extension of Educational Thought and Practice in the Sixteenth Century	377
	Knowledge as the way to peace: More, Sadoleto, Vives	379
	Thomas More and English independence of Rome	379
	Incipient social conscience: Utopia	382
	Towards an enlightened citizenry	385
	Sadoleto and universal harmony	386
	Knowledge for the common good: Juan Luis Vives	388
	Vives: the way to knowledge	391
	Reform of the school	394
	Sturm at Strasbourg: pietas litterata and the graded school	395
	Improvement of education in England: Thomas Elyot	398
	Elyot's theory of education for leadership	399
	Beyond the school: expansion of educational activities	402
14	The Search for Method: Towards a Ratio	406
	Sixteenth-century concern with grammar	406
	Reform of the grammar school: concepts of ordino and ratio	406
	Grammar texts: tradition and innovation	407
	Latin readers: colloquies by Erasmus, Vives, Corderius	412
	Introduction of dictionaries	417
	The question of Greek and Hebrew studies	418
	The ratio in the organization of the school	419

The Society of Jesus	420
Foundation: Ignatius Loyola and the Constitutions	420
Definition of Jesuit educational policy	421
The Jesuit Ratio studiorum	423
Search for a ratio	423
Ratio of 1599	424
Rules and methods of studies: praelectio and concertatio	425
The problem of a Jesuit grammar	427
The pietas litterata	428
The end of an era	432
NOTES	436
BIBLIOGRAPHY	483
INDEX	497