

Contents

Preface and Acknowledgements	vii
1 Introduction: Linguistics and Language Acquisition	1
1.1 Knowledge of Language: Competence and Performance	1
1.2 Types of Linguistic Knowledge	2
1.3 The Projection Problem	3
1.4 Universal Grammar	3
1.5 Outline	5
Notes	5
Further Reading	5
2 Phonological Acquisition	6
2.1 Speech Sounds	6
2.1.1 How Sounds are Made	6
2.1.2 Features	9
2.2 Phonetics, Phonology and Language Variation	11
2.3 Categorical Perception in Adults and Infants	13
2.4 Early Speech Sounds ✕	18
2.5 Feature Acquisition ✕	21
2.6 Child Phonologies	22
2.6.1 Segmental Rules	24
2.6.2 Suprasegmentals	29
2.7 Problems and Ideas	38
2.8 Summary and Conclusions	41
Notes	42
Further Reading	43
Questions and Exercises	43
3 Morphological Development and Innovation	45
3.1 Types of Morphological Rules	45
3.2 A Morphological Model	47
3.3 Children's Knowledge of Level Ordering	49
3.4 Rule Use and Innovation	51
3.5 Problems and Unknowns	53
3.6 A Cross-Linguistic Perspective	55

3.7	Summary and Conclusions	58
	Questions and Exercises	59
4	The Acquisition of Syntax	61
4.1	Syntactic Structures and Universal Grammar	61
4.1.1	Basic Syntax	61
4.1.2	Levels of Representation	64
4.1.3	Universal Grammar: Principles and Parameters	70
4.1.4	Modules of Government Binding Theory	71
4.1.5	Government Binding Theory and the Acquisition of Syntax	74
4.2	The Outer Course of Development	74
4.3	Early Syntax	75
4.3.1	Early Phrase Structure	76
4.3.2	Subjectless Sentences	80
4.4	Syntax in the Pre-School Years	82
4.4.1	Children's Knowledge of the Binding Theory	82
4.4.2	Bounding Theory and the Development of Movement	88
4.4.3	Children's Grammar of Control	95
4.4.4	Summary	97
4.5	Syntactic Development after Age Six	98
4.6	Syntactic Development: Some Popular Ideas Reconsidered	99
4.6.1	'Semantics First'	100
4.6.2	'Syntax is Late'	105
4.7	Summary and Conclusions	107
	Notes	107
	Further Reading	108
	Questions and Exercises	108
5	Further Aspects of Syntactic and Semantic Development	113
5.1	The Auxiliary System of English	113
5.1.1	Auxiliary Verbs and Morphological Endings	113
5.1.2	Negation and "Do" Support'	116
5.1.3	A Syntactic Analysis	117
5.2	The Acquisition of Auxiliary Systems: Syntax	119
5.3	The Acquisition of Negation	125
5.4	An Aside on Developmental Orders and Individual Development	126
5.5	The Acquisition of Modality, Tense and Aspect	127
5.5.1	Modality	127
5.5.2	Tense and Aspect	128

5.6	The Development of Word Meanings	130
5.6.1	Word Meanings	130
5.6.2	The Semantic Feature Hypothesis	131
5.6.3	Challenges to the Semantic Feature Hypothesis	132
5.7	Quantification and Logical Form	134
5.8	Summary and Conclusions	137
	Note	138
	Further Reading	138
	Questions and Exercises	139
6	Cognition, Environment and Language Learning	140
6.1	Innateness	140
6.2	Input and Errors	142
6.3	The Role of Universal Grammar in Language Development	144
6.4	Learnability and Acquisition Principles	145
6.4.1	Subjacency and Degree- n Learnability	146
6.4.2	The Subset Principle	148
6.5	Summary: Components of a Learning Model	150
6.6	Some Questions and Problems in Acquisition Theory	151
6.6.1	Markedness and Orders of Acquisition	151
6.6.2	Continuity or Maturation?	153
6.6.3	Parameter Setting vs. Hypothesis Testing	155
6.7	The Limits of the Linguistic Model: Lexical Learning	156
6.8	Motherese	160
6.9	Language Development and Cognitive Development	163
6.9.1	Specificity and the Logic of Learning	163
6.9.2	Constructivism and Developmental Orders	165
6.10	Summary and Conclusions	167
	Notes	168
	Further Reading	169
	Questions and Exercises	169
7	Performance Development	173
7.1	Estimating Competence	173
7.2	Adult Processing Mechanisms	177
7.2.1	A Model	177
7.2.2	Grammar vs. General Knowledge and Strategies	178
7.2.3	Words-to-Message Processing	184
7.3	Children's Sentence Processing	186
7.3.1	On-line Computation of Syntactic Structure	186
7.3.2	Strategies and Children's Comprehension	188

7.3.3 Resolution Strategies	191
7.4 Discourse Integration	193
7.5 Summary and Conclusions	196
Notes	198
Further Reading	198
Questions and Exercises	198
Bibliography	201
Index	220