

CONTENTS

PREFACE	xi
INTRODUCTION The Diversity of Working-Class Experience	1
PART I · THE LABOUR MARKET, INCOMES AND CONSUMPTION	5
1 · WORK AND WORKERS	7
I Size of the labour force; the activity rate	7
II Beginning work and retirement	8
III Children's employment	9
IV Women's employment	17
V The labour force as a whole	25
2 · POPULATION: BIRTHS AND DEATHS	32
I Labour history and population history; the three phases of population history	32
II Birth-rates in the nineteenth century; fertility differentials; the early birth-control campaign; the decline in birth-rate	34
III Working-class mortality; occupational mortality and its decline; mortality from other causes	42
IV Population and working-class living standards	53
3 · WAGES AND LIVING STANDARDS	57
I Nineteenth-century wages in perspective	57
II The debate on the standard of living, 1800–50, (a) the course of real wages	58
III The debate on the standard of living,

1800-50, (b) non-wage aspects of living standards; the alternatives to industrial England	64
IV Real wages, 1850-1914	73
V Non-monetary changes in living standards, 1850-1914; changes in working hours, 1815-1914; the worker as consumer, 1815-1914, changes in leisure, diet, and housing	76
VI Wage differentials—occupational, spatial, sex, and international differentials	99
VII Quality of the labour force and the causes of changes in real wages, 1815-1914	109
4 · POVERTY	117
I The extent of poverty	117
II Causes of poverty	120
III Treatment of poverty, (a) charity	126
IV Treatment of poverty, (b) the poor law; the old poor law and the 1834 Poor Law Amendment Act	130
V The new poor law; the poor law under attack	136
5 · MIGRANTS, EMIGRANTS, IMMIGRANTS	144
I Changes in population distribution; costs and benefits of labour mobility; British labour mobility, 1815-1914	144
II Changes in labour mobility, 1815-1914	148
III Age, occupational, and spatial variations in labour mobility	153
IV Irish immigration—rate of immigration and pattern of settlement	158
V Social problems associated with Irish immigration	160
VI Irish immigrant employment; occupational immobility; effect of Irish immigration upon wages, employment, and trade unionism; segregation and integration	164
VII Irish labour and British economic growth	171
VIII Alien immigrants in Britain—their numbers, location, and occupations	176

IX Social and economic consequences of alien immigration	178
X Segregation and anti-alienism	185

PART II · WORKING-CLASS MOVEMENTS 189

6 · WORKING-CLASS MOVEMENTS, 1815–1850 (I) TRADE UNIONISM AND OTHER MOVEMENTS	191
I Introduction: the growth of working-class movements	191
II Extent and characteristics of early trade unionism	192
III Unionism under the Combination Acts	197
IV The general unionism of 1829–34; cautious progress, 1834–50; trade unionism and working-class welfare before 1850	199
V Owenism, the Reform campaign of 1830–2; the Factory Movement; the Anti-Poor Law campaign	206
7 · WORKING-CLASS MOVEMENTS, 1815–1850 (II) CHARTISM, REVOLUTION, AND THE MAKING OF CLASS	219
I Chartism and its origins	219
II Early Chartism	221
III Chartism after the first petition	224
IV Occupational and regional differences in Chartist strength; Irish immigrants and Chartism; trade unions and Chartism	228
V Chartist achievements	232
VI Chartism and revolution	234
VII Prospects of revolution before Chartism	237
VIII British social stability; historians and revolution	242
IX The making of class, 1815–50	245

8 · WORKING-CLASS MOVEMENTS, 1850-1888: NEW MODEL UNIONISM TO THE REVIVAL OF SOCIALISM	250
I Mid-century changes in working-class movements; trade union strength and membership, 1850-88	250
II 'New model' union characteristics; other unions; trade councils	259
III Political activities, 1850-75; the Junta and its policies; working-class radicalism in the 1860s; the Royal Commission on Trade Unions, 1867-9, and the legislation of 1871-5; the TUC; the working-class vote	264
IV Politics 1875-88; the Lib-Lab alliance; criticism from the left and the background to 'new unionism'	271
V The reformist tradition; the retreat from class consciousness and the re-awakening of the 1880s; the labour aristocracy; social mobility, 1850-88	275
VI Industrial relations; collective bargaining before 1860; the Nottingham Hosiery Board and the expansion of collective bargaining; the weaknesses of British industrial relations	281
VII Contribution of unions and other working- class movements to working-class welfare, 1850-88; unions and productivity; the union performance; the effect of unionism upon unorganized workers	286
9 · WORKING-CLASS MOVEMENTS, 1889-1914: 'NEW UNIONISM' TO TRIPLE ALLIANCE	295
I Trade union strength and membership, 1889-1914	295
II The 'new' union advance, 1889-91	304
III The employers' counter-attack and the 'new' union retreat; the ILP and 'new' unionist political activity in the 1890s	307

IV The old unions move to the left	311
V The labour movement at the turn of the century	313
VI Taff Vale; political developments, 1901-06; the 1906 election; Liberal social reforms, 1906-14	315
VII Strife, 1908-14, the causes of unrest	318
VIII Prospects of revolution or revolutionary strike, 1910-14, class consciousness and the making of class, 1889-1914	329
IX Working-class movements and working-class living standards, 1889-1914	335
CONCLUSION	339
NOTES	343
FURTHER READING	399
INDEX	407