

CONTENTS

	List of contents.....	i
	List of tables.....	ii
	List of illustrations.....	li
	Acknowledgments.....	v
	Abbreviations.....	vi
	List of Classical works used in this thesis	Vii
CHAPTER 1	Introduction. Defining the problem of fish-eating in Classical Greece	1
CHAPTER 2	Fish-eating between the hammer of Classics and the anvil of economy.....	5
2.1	Philologists, ancient historians and the archaeologists of the early 20 th century on ancient fishing and fish-eating.....	5
2.2	Modeling and quantification of ancient fishing.....	7
2.3	Fish in the economy and beyond. The recent work.....	11
2.4	Conclusions.....	14
CHAPTER 3	Theoretical framework adopted in this study.....	16
3.1	Food consumption in anthropological thinking.....	16
3.2	Food consumption as a social phenomenon.....	18
3.3	The social life of things – the social life of fish.....	20
3.4	Food embodiment and the senses.....	22
3.5	Conclusions.....	23
CHAPTER 4	Shaping the methodology.....	24
4.1	Objects versus texts: the scope and methods of historical archaeology.....	24
4.2	Objects and texts: shaping a methodology.....	25
4.3	Definitions of terms and limits.....	30
4.4	Conclusions.....	32
CHAPTER 5	Catching fish – production.....	33
5.1	The productivity riddle: How rich in fish were the Greek waters?	33
5.2	What fish resources were exploited?	37
5.3	The geographical distribution of exploited fish resources.....	50
5.4	Conclusions.....	65
CHAPTER 6	The invisible fishermen.....	67
6.1	What is a fisherman?	67
6.2	Looking for the fishermen in the fish names.....	69
6.3	Looking for the fishermen in the fish-myths.....	70
6.4	Conclusions.....	74
CHAPTER 7	Fish becoming food – distribution and marketing... ..	75
7.1	Fresh fish.....	75
7.2	Preserved fish.....	84
7.3	Conclusions.....	88
CHAPTER 8	Where, when and with whom to eat fish – the social context of fish consumption.....	91
8.1	Fish-eating with the gods and the dead.....	91
8.2	Secular fish-eating in houses and taverns.....	99
8.3	Conclusions.....	102

CHAPTER 9	Choosing fish for the table – alternative taxonomies	103
9.1	The Akraephia fish price list.....	103
9.2	Edible fish categories beyond Linnean taxonomy.....	106
9.3	Conclusions.....	112
CHAPTER 10	Eating the fish – fish-dishes and the senses.....	113
10.1	A liking for specific fish tastes as shared culture.....	113
10.2	Fish-eating in 4 th century as a multilevel sensual act – the fish-plates.....	115
10.3	Conclusions.....	123
CHAPTER 11	Conclusions.....	124
Appendix 1	Literary sources related to fish, fishing and fish-eating	126
Appendix 2	Epigraphical sources related to fish, fishing and fish-eating	135
Appendix 3a-b	Fishing gear / Fish-related structures	137
Appendix 4	Sites of special interest to the study of ancient fishing and fish consumption.	140
Appendix 5	Fish bone recording codes.	149
References		152

LIST OF TABLES

4.1	Scientific and common English fish names.....	28
5.1a-g	Fish taxonomic representation by site.....	38
5.2	Taxonomic presence of fish on the basis of fish remains and references in literary sources.....	41
5.3	Geography of Classical fishing, fish eating and fish in cult based on literary sources.....	44
5.4	Size range of the fish exploited in Classical Greece.....	47
5.5	Geographical distribution of fish and fishing related data.....	51
5.6	Geographical distribution of archaeologically or literarily attested fish resources.....	62
6.1	Fish names of popular fish varieties.....	70
7.1	Itanos. Fish anatomical part representation.....	82
7.2	Terms related to the variety of preserved fish products.....	86
8.1	Kalaureia – “Dining deposit”. Fish taxonomic and body size representation.....	94
8.2	Kalaureia – “Dining deposit”. Fish anatomical part representation.....	95
9.1	Fish and prices in the Akraephia inscription (end of 3 rd -beg. of 2 nd c. B.C.).....	104

LIST OF ILLUSTRATIONS

4.1	Fish basic skeletal groups: Cranial, branchial, pectoral and pelvic bones, abdominal vertebrae and caudal vertebrae (drawing from Bristow 1992, p.10).	26
5.1	Satellite image of Greece (Talent Cruiser, www.cruiser.gr/en_main.html accessed 25 November 2006).	34
5.2	Spatial and temporal variation of productivity in the Aegean Sea as it is indicated by images of the surface fluorescent pigments (average) during April (a) and September (b) (from Lykousis et al. 2002, fig. 2).	34
5.3	A small wetland at the estuaries of Geropotamos, a seasonal river, east of Rethymnon, Crete (photograph by D. Mylona).	36
5.4	Distribution of small wetland sites (red dots) on the Aegean Islands (from Katsorodakis

	and Paragamian 2006, p.4).	43
5.5	Young fisherman on the coast. Scene in the interior of cup by Ambrosios Painter, 6 th c. B.C., now in the Boston Museum of Fine Arts (Beazley 1963, p. 173, no 9; photograph from Sparkes 1995).	49
5.6	Thynneio : an arrangement of permanent nets and watching-towers set neat the coast for the catching of migratory fish (from Koukoules 1948, p. 34).	52
5.7a	Satellite image of northern Greece and part of northern Aegean (from Talent Cruiser, www.cruiser.gr/en_main.html accessed 25 November 2006).
5.7b	Satellite image of part of northern Aegean and Euboea (from Talent Cruiser, www.cruiser.gr/en_main.html accessed 25 November 2006).	53
5.7c	Satellite image of mainland west coast and Ionian sea (from Talent Cruiser, www.cruiser.gr/en_main.html accessed 25 November 2006).	53
5.7d	Satellite image of southern Thessaly and Sterea (from Talent Cruiser, www.cruiser.gr/en_main.html accessed 25 November 2006).	54
5.7e	Satellite image of Corinthian gulf (from Talent Cruiser, www.cruiser.gr/en_main.html accessed 25 November 2006).	54
5.7f	Satellite image of Attica, Saronic gulf and Argolic gulf (from Talent Cruiser, www.cruiser.gr/en_main.html accessed 25 November 2006).	55
5.7g	Satellite image of Peloponnese (from Talent Cruiser, www.cruiser.gr/en_main.html accessed 25 November 2006).	55
5.7h	Satellite image of Cyclades (from Talent Cruiser, www.cruiser.gr/en_main.html accessed 25 November 2006).	56
5.7i	Satellite image of Crete (from Talent Cruiser, www.cruiser.gr/en_main.html accessed 25 November 2006).	56
5.7j	Satellite image of Dodecanese (from Talent Cruiser, www.cruiser.gr/en_main.html accessed 25 November 2006).	57
5.8	Olynthus netting needles (from Robinson 1941, pl. CXVI).	58
5.9	A hoard of several fish-hooks from Halieis, found at Lower Town (from Jameson et al. 1994, fig. 5.23).	61
6.1.	Marble statue of an old fisherman, Roman copy of a 2 nd -1 st c. B.C. original, Palazzo dei Conservatori, Rome (from Pollitt 1944, fig. 156).	67
6.2	Silver stater from Itanos. On the one side it depicts Glaukos holding a trident and fish, on the reverse two sea horses. 380/330 B.C. (from http://www.coinarchives.com/a/lotviewer.php?LotID=82924&AucID=89&Lot=899 accessed 23 December 2006).	72
6.3	Marble statuette of a man eaten by a sea-monster, 3 rd -4 th c. A.D. Cleveland Museum (from Farkas et al. 1987, pl. XXI).	73
7.1	Representations of two men carrying fish on a pole. One is carrying two large fish (tunas?) and the other two baskets of smaller fish. Black figure amphora by Ambrosios painter, 6 th c. B.C., now in Berlin (Beazley 1963, p. 109, no 30; photograph from Sparkes 1995, fig. 11.5 and 11.6).	77
7.2	Site plan of the Kenchreae fish-tanks. Spaces A-F are the interconnected vats (from Shaw 1978, pl. 11).	79
7.3	Sacred Lake on Delos (from Bruneau and Ducat 2005, p. 170, fig. 42).	80
7.4	Salted and sun dried chub mackerels (Scomber japonicus), called in Greek "tsiros" (photograph by D. Mylona).	84
7.5	Site plan of the Punic Amphora Building, 5 th c. B.C., Corinth (from Williams II, 1980, p. 109).	87
7.6	Punic amphorae of the Maña-Pascual A4 type (from Zimmerman-Munn 2003, p. 200, fig. 12.3).	88
7.7	Sections of fish scales found adhering to Punic amphorae fragments and other fish remains found in the Punic Amphora Building (from Zimmerman Munn 2003).	89
8.1	Tuna catch (from http://www.travelblog.org/Asia/Philippines/Mindanao/blog-50042.html accessed 10 January 2007).	91
8.2	Kalaureia site plan (The Kalaureia Excavation Project. Plan by E. Savini).	92
8.3	Triangular area, west of Building D, Kalaureia. The dark shaded area denotes the main body of the "dining deposit", while the light shaded area spilled over material of the same deposit plan (The Kalaureia Excavation Project. Plan by E. Savini).	93
9.1	Dolphin mosaic from the "House of Dolphins" on Delos, end of 2 nd –beginning of 1 st c. B.C. (from Asimakopoulou-Atzaka, 2003, fig. 18).	107
10.1	Fish plate outline (from McPhee and Trendal 1987, p.174, fig.4).	116

10.2	Attic fish plate from Taman (from McPhee and Trendal 1987, pl. 8a).	116
10.3	Attic fish plate from the northern Black sea (from McPhee and Trendal 1987, pl. 6b).	117
10.4	Attic fish plate from Tanagra (from McPhee and Trendal 1987, pl. 11a).	117
10.5	Taman peninsula. Engraving, 1823 (from Koromila 2001, p. 217).	118
10.6	Apulian fish plate from Tatanto, fourth quarter of the 4 th c. B.C., from the antiques market (from Zindel 1998, p. 77).	119
10.7	Apulian fish plate from Tatanto, fourth quarter of the 4 th c. B.C., from the antiques market (from Zindel 1998, p. 57).	120
10.8	Fish plate from a Punic cemetery at Palermo (Tomb 36), southern Italy, with fish remains found in it (from McPhee and Trendal 1987, pl. 15c).	121
10.9	Tuna in the market. The fishmonger slices the fish. Sicilian bell crater from Lipari, 4 th c. B.C., now in Museo Mandralisca at Cefalù (Trendall 1967, p. 208, no 54; photograph from Sparkes 1999, fig. 11.7).	122