

Contents

Acknowledgements	x
Vocabulary and abbreviations	xii
Glossary of names	xiv
Introduction	1
PART ONE: THE MOVEMENT	11
1 1956–1968–1980. Resistance to Communist rule in Central Europe	13
Two explanations	13
The Communist countries of Central Europe: a historical view	18
Revisionism	20
1956	23
1968: The Prague Spring	27
The Polish situation	31
Conclusion	34
2 Class, nation, democracy	35
The birth of the movement	35
Workers, intellectuals and the Pope	35
August 1980	37
Three dimensions	40
Class action and trade-union activity	40
In the name of the nation	44
Democracy everywhere	49
The unity of Solidarity	51
Trade-union and national action	51
Trade-union and democratic action	53
Democratic and national action	54
The social movement and the liberation of society	55
Note The nature of popular movements in Communist Central Europe	59

3	A self-limiting movement	64
	The limits	65
	The external threat	65
	The Party	66
	The Church	68
	The economic crisis	70
	Pushing to the limits	71
	The ideal and the possible	71
	The advisers	73
	Radicals and moderates	75
	PART TWO: THE LIBERATION OF SOCIETY	81
4	The movement evolves	83
	A year of struggles	83
	Three views of Solidarity's evolution	86
	Self-management	92
	On to political action?	98
5	The militants analyse their own action	103
	Self-analysis	103
	Gdańsk	105
	The Gdańsk Agreement	106
	The liberation of the enterprise	109
	Internal tensions	111
	Free elections	114
	Silesia	117
	A working-class community in rebellion	117
	Managing the enterprise	118
	Workers' control	121
	The triumph of the 'radicals'	122
	Rupture and retreat	124
	Warsaw	127
	Workers' rights	128
	Industrial democracy	129
	Action	133
	Conclusions	135

	PART THREE: TOWARDS RUPTURE	137
6	The problem of political power	139
	The Congress and the politicisation of the movement	140
	Internal democracy	141
	A critical moment	143
	Five leaders	145
	Economic reform	150
	Autumn 1981	152
7	Radicalism and compromise	156
	Light and shade	156
	Łódź	158
	Populism	158
	The third step	159
	Reversal	161
	Wrocław	162
	Nationalism and workers' power	163
	'True' Poles	165
	Caution	167
	Szczecin	168
	Trade unionists and politicians	168
	The impossibility of compromise	170
	Fate	171
	Conclusions	172
8	Resistance	179
	Beyond the limits?	179
	The rejection of confrontation	180
	Democratic movement or revolutionary struggle?	182
	Convictions	184
	Conclusion: The end of Communist society	188
	Chronology of events	196
	Bibliography	202