

Contents

Preface	page xiii
Acknowledgments	xv
Introduction: State and society in theoretical perspective	1
The state and theory	1
The home domain of each perspective	4
Our view of the state	6
Power and contradictions in the state	7
The logics of capitalism, bureaucracy, and democracy	11
Conclusions	13
1 Theoretical perspectives as modes of inquiry	15
Levels of analysis	16
World view	18
Method	21
Central societal process	23
Dimensions of society	25
The state and society	26
The power of concepts	26
Capitalism, the state, and democracy	30
Conclusions	32
 PART I: THE PLURALIST PERSPECTIVE
2 State and society in pluralist perspective	35
The pluralist home domain	35
The pluralist world view	37
The state	41
Values	41

Individuals	43
Functions	43
The implicit state	44
Capitalism, democracy, and the state: the pluralist view	47
Modernization	47
Political participation	49
Political development	52
Consensus versus participation	54
Conclusions	57
 3 The democratic state and consensus	 59
Democracy	59
Political culture: the societal level	61
Modernization and democracy	69
Collective goals: the organizational level	70
Support for legislatures	72
Alienation versus efficacy and trust: the individual level	76
Socialization of leadership	79
Conclusions	82
 4 The democratic state and participation	 83
Social movements and party systems: the societal level	85
The institutionalization of a social movement	85
Party systems: a key mediating institution	89
Interest groups and parties: the organizational level	91
Opinions, voting, and protest: the individual level	95
Public opinion	95
Voting and political issues	101
The social control of protest	107
Conclusions	111
 5 The pluralist perspective on the bureaucratic state	 112
Bureaucratization and democracy	113
Bureaucratic functions and institutions: the societal level	115
Institutionalization: the capacity to govern	117
Bureaucratic cultures and responsiveness: the organizational level	119
Authority relations	120
Cooptation by constituencies	123
Agency cultures	125
The flow of benefits	128

Bureaucratic roles: the individual level	128
The budgetary process	129
Conclusions	134
6 The pluralist perspective on the capitalist state	136
Values and functions in the economy: the societal level	137
Political leadership and economic growth	143
Democracy and the market	146
Business and corporate power: the organizational level	148
Citizenship rights: the individual level	153
Conclusions	156
Epilogue: the problem of governance	157
 PART II: THE MANAGERIAL PERSPECTIVE
7 State and society in managerial perspective	161
The managerial home domain	161
The managerial world view	164
Power and structure	169
Society, state, and organizations	171
Capitalism, democracy, and the state: the managerial view	174
Industrialization	175
Elite competition	176
Rationalization	178
Bureaucratic functions versus elite strategies	181
Conclusions	182
8 The bureaucratic state and centralization	184
The historical establishment of bureaucratic states:
the societal level	185
Centralization: the organizational level	192
The process of centralization	196
Elites and masses: the individual level	198
Conclusions	201
9 The bureaucratic state and fragmentation	202
Breakdown of elite capacity: the societal level	202
Fragmentation of the state: the organizational level	209
Vertical fragmentation in the federal state	210
Horizontal fragmentation	215
Political and bureaucratic dilemmas: the individual level	219
Conclusions	222

Contents

10	The managerial perspective on the capitalist state	223
	The managerial critique of class analysis	223
	Corporatism and state planning: the societal level	227
	Corporatism	234
	Corporate power: the organizational level	238
	Economic and administrative elites: the individual level	243
	Conclusions	249
11	The managerial perspective on the democratic state	250
	The managerial view of democracy	250
	Strategies of elite domination: the societal level	254
	Elite manipulation: the organizational level	259
	Collective action: the individual level	263
	Conclusions	267
 PART III: THE CLASS PERSPECTIVE
12	State and society in class perspective	271
	The class home domain	271
	The functional versus the political approach to the state	273
	Capitalism, democracy, and the state: the class view	279
	Capital accumulation	280
	Class struggle	281
	Socialization of the costs of production	284
	Conclusions	285
13	The capitalist state and accumulation	288
	Class and state formation: the societal level	288
	Corporate capital and state policy: the organizational level	296
	The ruling class and the working class: the individual level	301
	Conclusions	307
14	The capitalist state and class struggle	308
	The debate over the nature of capitalist crisis	308
	Crisis of the mode of production: the societal level	313
	Accumulation versus legitimation: the organizational level	317
	Class consciousness and class culture: the individual level	325
	Conclusions	330
15	The class perspective on the democratic state	333
	Democracy and capitalism	333
	Class alliances and revolution: the societal level	340

Trade unions, parties, and movements: the organizational level	345
The historical conditions of political choice: the individual level	353
Conclusions	359
16 The class perspective on the bureaucratic state	361
Bureaucracy and capitalism	362
The changing needs of capital: the societal level	367
Public bureaucracies and class conflict: the organizational level	372
The Department of Labor	372
The U.S. Post Office	373
The Chicago schools	376
The legal repression of consciousness: the individual level	378
Conclusions	382
 PART IV: THEORY, POLITICS, AND CONTRADICTIONS IN THE STATE
17 The powers of theory	387
The powers of theory	388
Theoretical perspectives	389
Concepts, science, and truth	394
The state in history	400
Public policy and the media: the invisibility of theory	401
Conclusions	405
18 The power of politics	408
Theoretical conceptions of politics	409
The political spectrum	410
Liberal and conservative politics	412
Reform and reactionary politics	415
Socialist and fascist politics	417
Institutional tendencies and political types	419
The power of politics	421
Politics and institutions	423
Conclusions	424
19 The power of contradictions	427
Historical relations of capitalism, the state, and democracy	427
The logics of institutional development	428

The logic of capitalism	429
The logic of bureaucracy	430
The logic of democracy	430
Contradictory logics of the state	432
Internal contradictions	433
Conclusions	440
Glossary	444
Bibliography	452
Name index	468
Subject index	473

Tables and figure

Tables

1. Power and contradiction in perspectives on the state	10
2. Theoretical perspectives and elements of a mode of inquiry	16
3. Levels of analysis and levels of abstraction	21

Figure

1. The political spectrum	411
---------------------------	-----