

Contents

Acknowledgements	xi
Introduction: history and popular culture	1
The prizewinning past	7
Selling historically	8
Desiring history	10
Historiopia/historioglossia	11
PART I
The popular historian	15
1 The public historian, the historian in public	17
The 'new gardening' and the publicity historian	17
History, historians, historiography, and celebrity: Great Britons	22
The David Irving libel trial and aftermath	27
2 Popular history in print	31
Narrative history	32
Political diaries and witness accounts	33
Autobiography, personal memoir and biography	35
Historical biography	38
The past for children: school and Horrible Histories	39
The status of the popular history author	42
Popular circulation: magazines	44
Reception and consumption: reading groups and reader-reviews	46
3 The historian in popular culture	49
'That's you, that is': historian as child, adventurer, and hero	49
The Da Vinci Code	53

PART II*Enfranchisement, ownership and consumption:*'Amateur' histories

- 4 The everyday historical: local history, metal detecting, antiques 62
- Local history* 62
- Metal detecting, popular archaeology, treasure hunting* 65
- History as hobby: collecting and antiquing* 67
- Antiques on television: Antiques Roadshow, Flog It!, Bargain Hunt* 68
- 5 Genealogy: hobby, politics, science 73
- 'I'm getting more and more Jewish as this goes on': self-identity and celebrity revelation* 77
- Roots, identity genealogy and America* 84
- Science: genetic genealogy and daytime detection* 86
- 6 Digital history: archives, information architecture, encyclopaedias, community websites and search engines 90
- New sources, new tools, new archives* 90
- Networked interfaces with information: search engines, Wikipedia* 93
- Hacking history: Google Earth* 98
- Open source code and community websites* 99

PART III*Performing and playing history

- 7 Historical re-enactment 105
- Combat re-enactment: WARS and the Sealed Knot* 105
- Re-enactment and place as historical evidence: documentary* 109
- Living theatre: museums, live and Living History* 116
- Getting medievalish: anachronism, faires and banquets* 119
- 8 Recycling culture and re-enactment/cultural re-enactment 124
- Music, performance and remakes* 124
- The first time as atonement, the second time as art: Lifeline and Jeremy Deller* 127
- The 'extreme historian': reinhabiting the past* 129
- 9 History games 133
- First person shoot 'em up history* 133
- Role playing and history as identity* 139

Civilization and disc contents: strategy games 141
 Wargames and scale models 144

PART IV

History on television 147

10 Contemporary historical documentary 149

Documentary as form: self-consciousness and diversion 149
'Neither wholly fictional nor wholly factual': history on television 150
'Contemporary, lively and egalitarian': Schama and Starkey 154
History on international television 160

11 Reality History 163

Empathy, authenticity and identity 163
Reality TV 165
Historical difference and ideology 172
Authenticity and the historical revelation of self 176

PART V

The 'historical' as cultural genre 181

12 Historical television: classic serial, costume drama and comedy 184

Adaptation and costume drama 185
Queering the genre: Tipping the Velvet and The Line of Beauty 192
Boy's own authentic drama: Sharpe and Hornblower 196
Innovation and obscenity: Rome and Deadwood 199
'Good moaning': comedy and time travel 201

13 Historical film 208

National cinema, international audiences and historical film 208
The heritage debate and British film 211
History, complexity and horror: Atonement and The Wind that Shakes the Barley 214

14 Imagined histories: novels, plays and comics 217

'A bodice-ripper with a bibliography': historical novels 217
Graphic novels and hybrid genres 225
Historical stage drama 228

PART VI

Artefact and interpretation 233

15 Museums and physical encounters with the past 236

Museums and government policy 236

Digitisation and economics 240

Conclusions: nostalgia isn't what it used to be 248

Notes 251

Index 287