

Contents

Acknowledgments 9

Introduction

by Anne R. Larsen and Colette H. Winn 11

PART ONE

Coming to Writing:

Women's Exclusionary and Revisionary Practices

Women Addressing Women: The Differentiated Text

by Deborah N. Losse 23

Poolside Transformations: Diana and Actaeon Revisited by

French Renaissance Women Lyricists

by Kirk D. Read 38

Catherine Des Roches's Le Ravissement de Proserpine:

A Humanist/Feminist Translation

by Tilde Sankovitch 55

Marguerite de Valois and the Problematics of Female

Self-Representation

by Patricia Francis Cholakian 67

PART TWO

Writing the Body and the Poetics of Feminine Desire

Louise Labé: The Mysterious Case of the Body in the Text

by Paula Sommers 85

"Trop en Corps": Marguerite de Navarre and the Transgressive Body

by Colette H. Winn 99

Carpe Diem, Poetic Immortality, and the Gendered Ideology of Time
by Cathy Yandell	115
Patriarchy and the Maternal Text: The Case of Marguerite de Navarre
by Carla Freccero	130

PART THREE

Literary Camouflages and the Politics of Reception

Gendered Oppositions in Marguerite de Navarre's Heptameron : The Rhetoric of Seduction and Resistance in Narrative and Society
by Gary Ferguson	143
Engendering Letters: Louise Labé Polygraph
by Tom Conley	160
Chastity and the Mother-Daughter Bond: Odet de Turnèbe's Response to Catherine des Roches
by Anne R. Larsen	172
"Les Puissances de Vostre Empire": Changing Power Relations in Marie de Gournay's Le Proumenoir de Monsieur de Montaigne From 1594 to 1626
by Cathleen M. Bauschatz	189
Appendix: Chronological Chart	209
Bibliography	213
Contributors	233
Index	237