

CONTENTS

Presentation . . . . .	vii
Acknowledgements . . . . .	xiii
1. Introduction: Central Europe in the history of philosophy . . . . .	1
2. Bolzano, Tarski, and the limits of logic . . . . .	13
3. Brentano's reform of logic . . . . .	41
4. The formalization of Husserl's theory of wholes and parts . . . . .	71
5. Frege's theory of real numbers . . . . .	117
6. The Anglo-Austrian Analytic Axis . . . . .	143
7. On what there isn't: the Meinong-Russell dispute . . . . .	159
8. Lukasiewicz, Meinong, and many-valued logic . . . . .	193
9. On understanding Leśniewski . . . . .	227
10. A Brentanian basis for Leśniewskian logic . . . . .	259
11. Leśniewski's logic and its relations to classical and free logics .	271
12. A semantics for Ontology . . . . .	295
13. The old problem of complex and fact . . . . .	319
14. Tractatus-Mereologico-Philosophicus? A Brentanian look at Wittgenstein, and a moral . . . . .	339
15. Wittgenstein, Schlick and the a priori . . . . .	361
16. Categories and ways of being . . . . .	377
Bibliography . . . . .	395
Index of Persons . . . . .	429
Index of Subjects . . . . .	435
Index of Cities . . . . .	441