

Contents

Acknowledgements	7
Introduction	9
The Early Franzen	17
Two "Plot Novels" – The Twenty-Seventh City and Strong Motion	18
Early Versions of The Corrections	51
Tragic Realism, Oprah, and the Aesthetics of Accessibility	61
From Social to Tragic Realism: Rescuing the Self	62
The Aesthetics of Accessibility	76
Reconstructing the Real	109
Aesthetic Exhaustion	113
Transcending Postmodernism	117
Experience and Memory	127
The Structure of The Corrections	141
Anxieties of the Self: Making Corrections	157
Corrections: The Novel's Leitmotif	157
Alfred's Loss of Self	176
Correcting Their Parents: Chip, Gary and Denise	201
Ending on a Hopeful Note: Enid	213
Subjective Realism: The Discomfort Zone	217
Conclusion	235
Works Cited	239