

Contents

Preface	page	xiii
Acknowledgments		xvii
A note on references and abbreviations		xxi
Introduction		1
1	Themes in the history of modern moral philosophy	3
	i Moral philosophy and social change	4
	ii Morality and self-governance	5
	iii Morality and religion	6
	iv Morality, epistemology, and moral psychology	9
	v A map of the book	11
	Part I The rise and fall of modern natural law	15
2	Natural law: From intellectualism to voluntarism	17
	i Origins of natural law theory	17
	ii St. Thomas's natural law morality	19
	iii Will and the good in voluntarism	21
	iv Luther's two kingdoms	26
	v Luther's voluntarism	27
	vi Calvin's humanistic voluntarism	32
3	Setting religion aside: Republicanism and skepticism	37
	i Virtú and the manipulative prince	37
	ii The self-governing republic	39
	iii Pyrrhonism rediscovered	42
	iv Montaigne: Skepticism and faith	44
	v Montaigne's test	47
	vi A Montaignian ethic?	50 vii Charron: Eclectic skepticism	52
	viii War and morality	56
		vii

4	Natural law restated: Suarez and Grotius	58
	i Suarez: Will and intellect in law	59
	ii Suarez: The law and its promulgation	62
	iii Suarez: Motives for obedience	64
	iv Grotius and religious belief	66
	v The Grotian problematic	70
	vi "Even if we should concede . . ."	73
	vii The insufficiency of virtue	75
	viii Rights and community	78
5	Grotianism at the limit: Hobbes	82
	i Desire and conflict	82
	ii From psychology to morality	88
	iii Morality in practice	92
	iv Hobbesian voluntarism	95
6	A morality of love: Cumberland	101
	i Love as law	102
	ii The status of the law of love	104
	iii From self-love to benevolence	107
	iv God, law, and obligation	109
	v Rationality in morality	113
	vi Ignorance and obedience	116
7	The central synthesis: Pufendorf	118
	i Moral entities	119
	ii Moral good and natural good	123
	iii Knowledge of natural law	126
	iv Perfect and imperfect duty	131
	v Law and obligation	134
	vi The significance of Pufendorf's voluntarism	138
8	The collapse of modern natural law: Locke and Thomasius	141
	i Locke and the Grotian problematic	142
	ii Elements of a science of morality	144
	iii Morality as a science	147
	iv Locke's voluntarism	149
	v Revelation and reason in morals	152
	vi Locke's early work on natural law	153
	vii Justice and love	156
	viii Voluntarism and empiricist morality	157
	ix Thomasius: The rejection of voluntarism	159
	x Obligation and advice	161
	xi Separating law and morality	163

	Part II Perfectionism and rationality	167
9	Origins of modern perfectionism	169
	i Stoicism Christianized: du Vair and Lipsius	170
	ii Herbert of Cherbury: Cosmos and Common Notions	176
	iii Herbert: Common Notions, morality, and religion	179
	iv Cartesian voluntarism	184
	v Descartes: Ignorance and virtue	185
	vi Descartes: Happiness, the passions, and love	189
10	Paths to God: I. The Cambridge Platonists	194
	i Whichcote: Morality as the core of religion	196
	ii John Smith: Perfection, love, and law	199
	iii More: Love's axioms	202
	iv Cudworth: A metaphysics of ethics	205
	v Cambridge Platonism and free will	210
11	Paths to God: II. Spinoza and Malebranche	215
	i Spinoza: Ethics in a world without ends	216
	ii Wisdom and the good life	220
	iii Spinozistic society	223
	iv Malebranche: Evil and God's general wills	225
	v Order, virtue, and happiness	228
	vi Acquiring merit	231
	vii Malebranchean morality	233
12	Leibniz: Counterrevolutionary perfectionism	236
	i The best possible world	237
	ii Freedom and determination by reasons	241
	iii Love, justice, and perfection	246
	iv Against Pufendorf: Law and will	250
	v Against Pufendorf: Justification and motive	254
	Part III Toward a world on its own	261
13	Morality without salvation	263
	i Gassendi's rehabilitation of Epicureanism	264 ii Free will and the incomprehensibility of God	269
	iii Morality and the hidden God	272
	iv Nicole: The ingenuity of self-interest	275
	v Bayle: Religion and the virtuous atheist	279
14	The recovery of virtue	285
	i Virtue and law	286
	ii Virtue in Utopia	289
	iii Harrington's hollow citizen	293

	iv	Shaftesbury's politics	295
	v	The diversity of the passions	298
	vi	Moral feeling, voluntarism, and skepticism	300
	vii	Virtue, happiness, and the complete citizen	306
15		The austerity of morals: Clarke and Mandeville	310
	i	Free will and reasons for action	311
	ii	Mathematical morality	314
	iii	Morality and rational agency	317
	iv	Morality in the best possible world	319
	v	Morality and the need for Christianity	321
	vi	Mandeville: Morality naturalized	323
	vii	Morality against nature	327
16		The limits of love: Hutcheson and Butler	330
	i	Carmichael: Pufendorf in Scotland	331
	ii	Hutcheson's morality of benevolence	333
	iii	Morality and sentiment	336
	iv	Reason, motive, and calculation	340
	v	Butler: The complexity of human nature	342
	vi	Conscience	345
	vii	Self-love, benevolence, and morality	349
	viii	God and morality	352
17		Hume: Virtue naturalized	354
	i	Moral philosophy as a science of sentiment	355
	ii	Desire, belief, and action	358
	iii	Laws of approval	362
	iv	Artificial and natural virtues	365
	v	Obligation	369
	vi	Hume and the classical republic	372
	vii	Morality and religion	373
18		Against a fatherless world	378
	i	Sentimentalism, skepticism, and the new rationalism	378
	ii	Price's intuitionism	380
	iii	Intuition and motivation	385
	iv	Morality and providential care	387
	v	Adam Smith: Sentimentalism restated	388
	vi	Moral philosophy dissolved	393
	vii	Reid: The active powers	395
	viii	Defending the obvious: The intuitive axioms	397
	ix	Freedom and morality	399
	x	Reid's legacy	402

19	The noble effects of self-love	404
	i Association and utility	405
	ii God and the greatest happiness	408
	iii Egoism and reform: Helvetius and d'Holbach	413
	iv Bentham: Making morality in a world on its own	419
	v De Sade: Self-love in a corrupt society	424
	 Part IV Autonomy and divine order	429
20	Perfection and will: Wolff and Crusius	431
	i Wolff: The need for system	432
	ii Wolffian psychology	435
	iii Wolffian ethics	438
	iv A note on Pietism	442
	v Crusius: The significance of free will	445
	vi Freedom and virtue	449
	vii Morality and God's will	452
21	Religion, morality, and reform	457
	i Voltaire and voluntarism	458
	ii La Mettrie: Atheism let loose	462
	iii Diderot: Morality without theory	466
	iv Rousseau: The origins of morality	470
	v The transformation of human nature	474
	vi Toward the classical republic	478
	vii Providence without intervention	480
22	The invention of autonomy	483
	i Toward the moral law	484
	ii On Rousseau's influence	487
	iii Theodicy and morality	492 iv Theodicy and freedom	497
	v Reason and sentiment	501
	vi Morality and the two worlds	505
23	Kant in the history of moral philosophy	508
	i Equality with God	509
	ii From self-governance to autonomy	513
	iii Will and desire	515
	iv Natural law, obligation, and moral necessity	518
	v Methods of ethics	522
	vi Virtue, love, and perfection	525

Epilogue	531
24 Pythagoras, Socrates, and Kant: Understanding the history of moral philosophy	533
i The Socrates story	534
ii The Pythagoras story	536 iii Revelation and reason	540
iv Kant and the Pythagoras story	543
v Has moral philosophy a single aim?	548
vi Continuity and change in moral philosophy	550
vii Progress in moral philosophy	553
Bibliography	555
1 Sources	555
2 Commentary	568
Index of names	593
Index of subjects	612
Index of biblical citations	624