

Contents

	Preface	xi
	Acknowledgements	xv
	Notes on usage	xvii
1	Frege: semantic value and reference	1
1.1	Frege's logical language	2
1.2	Syntax	6
1.3	Semantics and truth	8
1.4	Frege on semantic value: sentences and proper names	10
1.5	Function and object	13
1.6	Frege on semantic value: predicates, connectives and quantifiers	14
1.7	A semantic theory for a simple language	18
	Further reading	21
2	Frege and Russell: sense and definite descriptions	23
2.1	The introduction of sense	23
2.2	The nature of sense	28
2.3	The objectivity of sense: Frege's critique of Locke	36
2.4	Problems with Frege's notion of sense	42

2.5	A theory of sense?	54
2.6	Force and tone	55
2.7	Russell on names and descriptions	59
2.8	Scope distinctions	64
2.9	Russell's attack on sense	67
2.10	Russell on communication	72
2.11	Appendix: Frege's theses on sense and semantic value	75
	Further reading	76
3	Sense and verificationism: logical positivism	79
3.1	Introduction	79
3.2	The formulation of the verification principle	81
3.3	Foster on the nature of the verification principle	87
3.4	The a priori	92
3.5	Carnap on internal and external questions	101
3.6	Logical positivism and ethical language	106
3.7	Moderate holism	109
	Further reading	110
4	Scepticism about sense (I): Quine on analyticity and translation	113
4.1	Quine's attack on the analytic/synthetic distinction: introduction	114
4.2	The argument of "Two Dogmas" (part I)	114
4.3	Criticism of "Two Dogmas" (part I)	120
4.4	The argument of "Two Dogmas" (part II)	123
4.5	Criticism of "Two Dogmas" (part II)	126
4.6	Quine on the indeterminacy of translation: introduction	128
4.7	The argument from below	129
4.8	Evans and Hookway on the argument from below	136
4.9	The argument from above	143
4.10	Conclusion	149
	Further reading	150

5	Scepticism about sense (II): Kripke's Wittgenstein's sceptical paradox	153
5.1	The sceptical paradox	154
5.2	The sceptical solution and the argument against solitary language	163
5.3	Boghossian's argument against the sceptical solution	165
5.4	Wright's objections to the sceptical solution	170
5.5	Zalabardo's objection to the sceptical solution	172
	Further reading	175
6	Saving sense: responses to the sceptical paradox	177
6.1	Linguistic meaning and mental content	178
6.2	Sophisticated dispositionalism	181
6.3	Lewis-style reductionism and ultra-sophisticated dispositionalism	186
6.4	Fodor's "asymmetric dependency" account of meaning	190
6.5	McGinn on normativity and the ability conception of understanding	196
6.6	Wright's "judgement-dependent" account of meaning	201
6.7	Wittgenstein's dissolution of the sceptical paradox?	209
	Further reading	218
7	Sense, intention and speech-acts: Grice's programme	221
7.1	Homeric struggles: two approaches to sense	221
7.2	Grice on speaker's-meaning and sentence-meaning	224
7.3	Searle's modifications: illocutionary and perlocutionary intentions	228
7.4	Objections to Gricean analyses	233
7.5	Response to Blackburn	239

	Further reading	242
8	Sense and truth: Tarski and Davidson	245
8.1	Davidson and Frege	246
8.2	Davidson's adequacy conditions for theories of meaning	247
8.3	Intensional and extensional theories of meaning	249
8.4	Extensional adequacy and Tarski's convention (T)	252
8.5	Tarskian truth-theories	257
8.6	Truth and translation: two problems for Davidson	263
8.7	Radical interpretation and the principle of charity	266
8.8	Holism and T-theorems	273
8.9	Conclusion: theories of meaning and natural language	276
	Further reading	277
9	Sense, objectivity and metaphysics	279
9.1	Realism	279
9.2	Noncognitivism and the Frege–Geach problem	280
9.3	Realism and verification-transcendent truth	283
9.4	Acquisition, manifestation and rule-following: the arguments against verification-transcendent truth	286
9.5	Grades of objectivity: Wright on antirealism	295
9.6	Two threats of quietism	300
	Further reading	302
	Notes	305
	Bibliography	335
	Index	345