Contents

Introduction		vii
I	Models and reality	I
2	Equivalence	26
3	Possibility and necessity	46
4	Reference and truth	69
5	'Two dogmas' revisited	87
6	There is at least one a priori truth	98
7	Analyticity and apriority: beyond Wittgenstein and
	Quine	115
8	Computational psychology and interpretation theory	139
9	Reflections on Goodman's Ways of Worldmaking	155
10	Convention: a theme in philosophy	170
11	Philosophers and human understanding	184
12	Why there isn't a ready-made world	205
13	Why reason can't be naturalized	229
14	Quantum mechanics and the observer	248
15	Vagueness and alternative logic	27 I
16	Beyond historicism	287
Bibliography		304
Acknowledgements		309
Index		310