

CONTENTS

INTRODUCTION

I	The nature and scope of the inquiry	page 3
II	Some questions of terminology	9
III	A classification of propositions	16
IV	Concepts, bases, and instances	22

PART I THE LOGICAL CONTENT OF CONCEPTS AND PROPOSITIONS

V	On the primitive logical relations between ostensive concepts	31
VI	A comparison of full and primitive logical relations between ostensive concepts	42
VII	On the logical relations between ostensive and non-ostensive concepts	51
VIII	Primitive logical relations of higher order	62
IX	Non-primitive logical relations of higher order and the so-called "laws of thought"	71
X	Logically necessary and general propositions	80
XI	On empirical laws of nature	87
XII	Logical propositions in deductive and regressive reasoning and in definition	99
XIII	Validity and logical form	108

PART II THE APPLICABILITY OF CONCEPTS

XIV	Directly and indirectly given bases of ostensive concepts	119
XV	Statements about the remote, the remembered and the imagined	127

CONTENTS

XVI	Descriptions, explanations and interpretations	page 136
XVII	Interpretative levels and hierarchies of ostensive concepts	146
XVIII	On some alleged proofs of the applicability of interpretative categories	156
XIX	Disposition-statements	164
XX	On the privacy of immediate experience	172
XXI	On the ontology of ostensive concepts	180
XXII	On the ontology of non-ostensive concepts	188
XXIII	The truth of propositions	197
XXIV	On the non-discursive use of symbols	206

PART III THE FUNCTION OF CONCEPTS

XXV	The application and acceptance of concepts	217
XXVI	The unifying function of aspect-concepts	226
XXVII	On the instrumental and contemplative application of ostensive concepts	236
XXVIII	The practical application of ostensive concepts	246
XXIX	Moral rules and ethical "relativity"	255
XXX	Metaphysical and other directive propositions	264
XXXI	On the possible relevance of various types of metaphysical directives	273
XXXII	The adequacy of metaphysical directives	281
XXXIII	The place of metaphysical directives in philosophical thinking	289