Contents

Notes on contributors viii

Introduction 1
DAYA KISHAN THUSSU

Part I
Internationalizing media research 11

1 Why internationalize media studies and how? 13
DAYA KISHAN THUSSU

2 What should comparative media research be comparing? Towards a transcultural approach to ‘media cultures’ 32
ANDREAS HEPP AND NICK COULDRY

3 Globalization theories and media internationalization: a critical appraisal 48
TRISTAN MATTELART

4 Frames for internationalizing media research 61
NAREN CHITTY

5 Media and communication studies going global 75
JAN EKECRANTZ

Part II
Broadening the field of media studies 91

6 Globalizing media law and policy 93
SANDRA BRAMAN
Contents

7 Changing paradigms of media research and practice in contexts of globalization and terror 116
OLIVER BOYD-BARRETT

8 Comparative media law and policy: opportunities and challenges 131
STEFAAN VERHULST AND MONROE E. PRICE

9 The labouring of international communication 147
VINCENT MOSCO AND DAVID O. LAVIN

Part III
Regional perspectives on internationalization 163

10 Asian media studies: the struggle for international legitimacy 165
INDRAJIT BANERJEE

11 Rethinking Chinese media studies: history, political economy and culture 175
YUEZHI ZHAO

12 Media and cultural studies in the Arab world: making bridges to local discourses of modernity 196
TARIK SABRY

13 De-Sovietizing Russian media studies 214
ELENA VARTANOVA

14 Citizens’ media as political subjects: the case of community radio in Colombia 228
JAIR VEGA AND CLEMENCIA RODRÍGUEZ

Part IV
Pedagogic parameters: internationalizing media syllabi 247

15 Internationalizing media ethics studies 249
CEES J. HAMELINK

16 Media studies as an academic discipline 254
KAARLE NORDENSTRENG

17 International media studies in the US academy: a sampling of programmes and textbooks 267
JOHN D.H. DOWNING
18 Re-conceptualizing media studies in Africa
WINSTON MANO

277

19 The internationalization of the internet and its implications for media studies
GERARD GOGGIN AND MARK McLELLAND

294

Index

308