

Contents

Preface and Acknowledgements	ix
------------------------------	----

Part I Rationales

1	Why Teach the Media?	3
	What are media?	3
	What is media education?	4
	Why media education?	5
	The evolution of media education in the UK	6
	Democratization and defensiveness	9
	Towards a new paradigm	12
	Moving ahead: teaching and learning	14
	Moving ahead: a bigger picture	15
	A continuing story	17
2	New Media Childhoods	18
	Childhood and the media	19
	Changing childhoods	21
	Technologies	23
	Economics	25
	Texts	27
	Audiences	29
	Implications for education	32

3	Media Literacies	35
	Defining literacy	36
	A social theory of literacies	38
	Mapping media literacies	39
	Beyond the magic window	42
	Reality problems	44
	The limits of assessment	47
	Why literacy?	49

Part II The State of the Art

4	Defining the Field	53
	Production	54
	Language	55
	Representation	57
	Audiences	59
	Key concepts in practice	61
	Conclusion: some general principles	67
5	Classroom Strategies	70
	Textual analysis	71
	Contextual analysis	73
	Case studies	75
	Translations	77
	Simulations	79
	Production	82
	Conclusion	84
6	Locating Media Education	86
	A separate academic subject: Media Studies	87
	Media education across the curriculum	89
	Media education in language and literature teaching	93
	Media education and ICTs	95
	Vocational media education	98
	Media education beyond the classroom	99
	Conclusion	101

Part III Media Learning

7	Becoming Critical	107
	The social functions of 'criticism'	109
	Critical language games	111
	Approaching 'ideology'	114
	Learning critical discourse	119
	Beyond criticism?	120
8	Getting Creative	123
	Changing practices	125
	The limits of 'creativity'	127
	The social worlds of production	128
	Writing media	131
	Using genres	134
	Conclusion	137
9	Defining Pedagogy	139
	Understanding conceptual learning	140
	Towards a dynamic model	143
	Researching audiences: the social self	146
	Self-evaluation: from practice to theory	149
	Beyond the model	153

Part IV New Directions

10	Politics, Pleasure and Play	157
	Postmodern identities?	158
	Playful pedagogies	162
	The politics of parody	165
	Working through pleasure?	169
	Conclusion	171
11	Digital Literacies	173
	Towards digital literacies	175
	Models of digital production	179
	The meanings of 'access'	181
	Processes and products	183
	Technology and pedagogy	186

12	New Sites of Learning	189
	Media education beyond the classroom	191
	Media and youth work	194
	Media and 'informal' learning	196
	Evaluation	199
	Towards deschooling?	201
	References	204
	Index	216