

Contents

1. The Range of Rationality	1
1.1 Rationality as a Human Resource	1
1.2 Rationality and Intelligence	2
1.3 Ramifications of Rationality	9
1.4 The Systematic Nature of Reason	16
2. The Predicament of Reason	19
2.1 Stage-Setting for the Problem	19
2.2 Optimum-Instability	22
2.3 Implications of Optimum-Instability	25
2.4 Ideal vs. Practical Rationality: The Predicament of Reason	27
3. The Rationale of Rationality: Why Follow Reason?	33
3.1 The Problem of Validating Rationality	33
3.2 The Pragmatic Turn: Even Cognitive Rationality has a Pragmatic Basis	39
3.3 The Self-Reliance of Rationality is not Viciously Circular	42
4. Cognitive Rationality and Risk: A Critique of Scepticism	48
4.1 Is Cognitive Rationality Possible?	48
4.2 Scepticism and Risk	54
4.3 The Deficiency of Scepticism	61
4.4 Against Scepticism: The Pragmatic Dimension	64
4.5 Scepticism vs. Rationality	69
5. Cognitive Rationality and Consistency	73
5.1 Consistency: Absolute Requisite or Ultimate Ideal?	73
5.2 Preliminaries: Two very Different Sorts of Acceptability	76
5.3 Motivating the Acceptance of Inconsistent Theses	79
5.4 Linearly Inferential vs. Dialectically Cyclic Reasoning	83
5.5 Context and Dialectics	87
5.6 Consistency as a Cognitive Desideratum	90

6. The Rationality of Ends	92
6.1 A Critique of the Humean Conception of Reason: Rational Action requires Appropriate Ends	92
6.2 The Crucial Role of Interests: Wants and Preferences are not Enough for Rationality	97
7. Economic Rationality and Problems of Utility Maximization	107
7.1 The Problem of Utility	107
7.2 Preference vs. Preferability	111
7.3 Difficulties in Orthodox Decision Theory	115
8. The Systemic Unity of Reason	119
8.1 Practical Reason requires Cognitive and Evaluative Reason	119
8.2 Cognitive Reason has both Practical and Evaluative Dimensions	122
8.3 Evaluative Reason has Factual and Practical Dimensions	125
8.4 The Systemic Unity of Reason	126
8.5 The Parallelism between Rational Inquiry and Evaluation	128
9. Conceptual Egocentrism and the Limits of Cognitive Relativism	133
9.1 Rationality and Cognitive Relativism	133
9.2 The Basis Problem	136
9.3 The Local Absoluteness of our own Standards of Rationality	139
9.4 More on Criteriological Egocentrism: The Primacy of our own Standards	144
9.5 Limits to Cognitive Relativism: Metacriterial Monism	149
10. The Universality of the Rational	157
10.1 The Universality of Reason	157
10.2 Cultivation Hierarchies	163
10.3 Objectivity and Consensus	169
10.4 Objectivity and Cognitive Consensuality Contrasted: The Import of the Ideal	172
11. The Rationality of the Real	176
11.1 The Intelligibility of Nature	176
11.2 'Our' Side	180
11.3 Nature's Side	182

11.4 A Recognition of Limits	188
11.5 A 'Principle of Sufficient Reason'?	188
12. Rationality and Humanity	191
12.1 People as Rational Agents: The Presumption of Rationality	191
12.2 On Failing to do the Rational Thing	194
12.3 Against the Greeks	200
12.4 Rationality as a Duty: Ontological Obligation and the Imperative to Reason	204
13. Rationality and Happiness	210
13.1 Are Rational People happier?	210
13.2 Two Modes of 'Happiness'	211
13.3 More on the Affective Rewards of Rationality	216
13.4 Is Rationality Inhumane?	218
13.5 Reason as a Basis for Reflective Happiness	223
14. Conclusion: The Grandeur and Misery of Reason	224
14.1 The Grandeur of Reason	224
14.2 The Autonomy of Reason	227
14.3 The Misery of Reason	229
Name Index	231
Subject Index	233