

Contents

List of Illustrations	ix
Acknowledgments	xi
Introduction: Affect and the Movies	1
The Significance of Affect—A Theory of Affect at the Movies— In Defense of Films—Spectators and Roles: A Brief Note on Terminology
1. Pleasures, Desires, Fantasies	18
Movie Pleasures—Cognitive Play—Visceral Experience— Sympathy, Antipathy, and Parasocial Engagement—Narrative Scenarios and Emotional Satisfaction—Reflexive and Social Pleasures—The Multiple Pleasures of the Spectator—Movie Desires—Movies as Fantasies—Movies and Dreams
2. Movies and Emotions	48
Automaticity and the Psychological Unconscious—What Is Emotion?—A Cognitive-Perceptual Approach—Basic Concepts and Terms—Emotions inside and outside the Movie Theater— The Paradox of Fiction—Play and the Regulation of Emotion— Kinds of Emotions—Direct, Sympathetic/Antipathetic, Artifact, and Meta-emotions—Memory Traces and Associations— Summary: Emotions at the Movies
3. Stories and Sympathies	78
Affective Prefocusing—Paradigm Scenarios—Primary Emotions and the Movies—Hollywood and the New Hollywood—Narrative and Character—Classical Narrative Structure and Emotion— Character Engagement—Character Goals and Engagement— The Structure of Engagement—Character Engagement and Spectator Difference—What Character Engagement Is: A Summary

4.	The Sensual Medium	112
	Seeing and Hearing Movies—Film and the Body—Direct Affect—Representing Emotional Experience—Affective Mimicry—Mimicry and the Face—Mimicry and the Body—Music, Sound, and Affect—Affect and Contemporary Hollywood Style
5.	Affective Trajectories and Synesthesia	140
	Narrative Focus—Character Goals and Narration—Synesthetic Affect and Fittingness—Narrative Scenarios and Synesthetic Affect—Shame, Guilt, and the Spectator—Shame and Guilt as Meta-emotions—Shame/Guilt Scenarios and Synesthetic Affect—Four Parameters of Affective Trajectories
6.	Negative Emotions and Sympathetic Narratives	169
	Sympathetic and Distanced Narratives—The Paradox of Negative Emotions—Hume on the Paradox of Tragedy—Catharsis?—Managing the Negative Emotions—The Spillover Effect—Fantasies of Assurance and Control—Ideology in Sympathetic and Distanced Narratives
7.	The Rhetoric of Emotion: Disgust and Beyond	198
	The Affective Rhetoric of Film—The Case of Disgust—Disgust Defined—The Rise of Movie Disgust—The Nature of Movie Disgust—The Rhetoric of Movie Disgust—Polyester and Ironic Disgust—The Rhetoric of Emotion in Film
	Conclusion: Moving Viewers	221
	Notes	227
	Bibliography	253
	Index	269

Illustrations

1. Racial stereotypes and affective response: The Color Purple	15
2. Spectatorship and voyeurism: Rear Window	25
3. Grace Kelly's face and visceral response: Rear Window	28
4. Spectator and character fear: Jurassic Park	73
5. Fascination as an artifact emotion: Jurassic Park	74
6. Sympathy for Royal: The Royal Tenenbaums	88
7. Shifting and partial allegiances: Casablanca	105
8. The scene of empathy: City Lights	127
9. Troubled protagonists: Midnight Cowboy	155
10. Synesthetic guilt and shame: Strangers on a Train	165
11. Rose's grief: Titanic	170
12. Sentimental depictions of romantic love: Titanic	195
13. Overcoming disgust to affirm humanness: The Elephant Man	214
14. Ironic disgust aimed at Divine: Polyester	216

TABLES

Table 1: Types of spectator emotions	69
--------------------------------------	----