

Contents

Acknowledgements

Chapter 1	Appearance and Reality	1
1	The origins of an illusion	1
2	The British contribution	20
3	A persistent tradition	37
Chapter 2	Sensation, Perception and Perceptual Qualities	53
1	Cracks in the surface	53
2	The senses	60
3	Sensation	68
4	Sensation and feeling	78
Chapter 3	Sensations, Secondary Qualities and Appearances to Normal Observers	87
1	Sensation and perception	87
2	Sensations and secondary qualities	96
3	The reductive thesis	110
4	Being and seeming: the different modalities	120
5	Normal conditions and normal observers	127
Chapter 4	Secondary Qualities, Dispositions and Related Conundrums	130
1	The dispositional thesis	130
2	Pro and contra	134

3	Phenol-thio-urea: a decisive argument?	150
4	Of mice and men and Martians	159
5	Turning the tables	167
Chapter 5 Are Secondary Qualities Relative?		177
1	Absolute and relative descriptions of the world	177
2	On the non-relativity of secondary qualities	182
3	'Our best account of the nature of the external world'	194
4	Relativity to points of view	198
6	In Defence of Appearances	206
1	Looks and appearances	206
2	The apparent and the real	215
3	Subjective appearances	219
4	Descriptions of perceptual experiences	227
Index		240