

CONTENTS

I. RAW FEELING AND THE INTELLIGIBILITY GAP	I
I.1 Anna	I
I.2 Problems	2
I.3 The plot	5
I.4 Relational accounts and the infinite regress objection	8
I.5 Jackson's defence of a relational analysis	10
I.6 States, processes, and ontology	14
I.7 Bundle theories	15
I.8 Epiphenomenalism	17
I.9 Behaviourism	21
I.10 A rough fix on raw feeling	23
2. IS THE NOTION SOUND?	30
2.1 Wittgenstein and the inverted spectrum	30
2.2 Does raw feeling fall foul of the private language argument?	34
2.3 Anti-realism about sensation language	38
2.4 How we can know what others' raw feels are like	40
2.5 Beetles in boxes and Transformation	46
2.6 A brain in a vat	50
2.7 Can raw feeling be 'quined'?	55
2.8 Eliminativism in general	66
2.9 Conclusion	70
3. STRICT IMPLICATION AND THE SWISS CHEESE PRINCIPLE	71
3.1 The Zombie idea	71
3.2 The two-stage creation scenario and the Strict Implication thesis	74
3.3 More on the Strict Implication thesis	78
3.4 Absolute impossibility and the example of 'gnarled'	82

3.5	What has to be done?	86
3.6	Neurone Replacement Therapy: will it work?	88
3.7	The Swiss Cheese principle	89
3.8	Some general points about the nature of mental life	93
3.9	The core argument	94
3.10	Cartesian resistance	101
3.11	We may assume the Strict Implication thesis is true	104
4.	PERCEPTUAL INFORMATION	106
4.1	Pure stimulus-response systems	106
4.2	The Basic Package	109
4.3	The Machine Table robot	112
4.4	The realistic construal of information being for the system	115
4.5	The GIANT	117
4.6	The richness of perceptual information	123
4.7	Perceptual information and consciousness	125
4.8	Help from connectionist models	130
5.	CONSCIOUS SUBJECTS	136
5.1	The stickleback	136
5.2	More on 'directly active' information	142
5.3	How the stickleback's internal processes have characters for it	146
5.4	The stickleback as conscious subject	148
5.5	No further cognitive sophistication is required	153
5.6	Language is not necessary	158
5.7	Blindsight	162
5.8	Why there couldn't be Zombies	164
5.9	Is consciousness all-or-nothing?	167
5.10	Subjects of raw feeling	169
6.	THE CHARACTER OF RAW FEELING	175
6.1	What seems to be the trouble	175
6.2	Why the bald identity theory won't help	176
6.3	Failure of the 'inner sense' approach	180
6.4	The inverter operation	186

6.5	Shoemaker's Martians	189
6.6	A structure of contrasts	190
6.7	What determines which way round?	198
6.8	Alternative vision	202
6.9	Where does this leave functionalism?	206
7.	THE GAP HAS BEEN BRIDGED	210
7.1	Is there still a mystery?	210
7.2	The inverted spectrum strikes again—or does it?	213
7.3	The question of necessary connection	214
7.4	An impossible requirement	216
7.5	Nagel's challenge	218
7.6	The argument from knowledge	226
7.7	'Facts beyond the reach of human concepts'	231
7.8	'The real nature of human experience'	234
7.9	A last look at the intelligibility gap	236
	Bibliography	239
	Index	245