

Contents

Preface		vii
Chapter One	Three Ways to Survival	1
	1 Establishing two fundamentals	2
	2 Possible routes around or over the obstacle	8
Chapter Two	Plato: (i) From Preexistence to Immortality	19
	1 Remarkable assumptions unremarked	19
	2 Reminiscence of preexistence	29
Chapter Three	Plato: (ii) Attempted Proofs of Immortality	35
	1 Two concepts of soul	36
	2 The good life and the principle of life	38
	3 Two anaemic arguments	42
	4 Everlasting lives and timeless Ideas	44
	5 Plato defends Platonic assumptions	50
Chapter Four	Plato: (iii) Intimations of Immateriality	53
	1 Unmoved movement and acting for reasons; both supposed immaterial	54
	2 Causes and choices	59
	3 Inconceivables, or commonplaces?	67
Chapter Five	Aristotle and Aquinas	71
	1 Aristotle, and the immortality of the intellect	72
	2 The expedients of Aquinas	78

Chapter Six	The Cartesian Turn	89
	1 Myself essentially a thinking substance	92
	2 Three consequences of incorporeality	97
Chapter Seven	Personal Identity: (i) Conceivable Differences?	107
	1 Contemporary objections to the Cartesian Conceivability Contention	108
	2 The Imaginability Thesis	109
	3 Personal identity and material continuity	118
Chapter Eight	Personal Identity: (ii) Uniting Memories?	127
	1 The implications of open texture	131
	2 Memory proposed as the uniting principle	136
	3 Personality and personhood	142
Chapter Nine	Substances, Stuff and Consciousness	145
	1 No-ownership, Serial Theories of the Self	146
	2 Direct knowledge of bodiless continuity?	151
	3 The traditional mind–body problem	152
	4 The Mind/Brain Identity Theory	159
Chapter Ten	The Significance of Parapsychology	165
	1 The evidential situation	167
	2 Platonic–Cartesian assumptions in parapsychology	171
	3 What would bodilessness be like, and for whom or what?	180
	Bibliography	185
	Name Index	197