

Contents

Preface	ix
1 What is Analytical Philosophy?	1
1.1 What is philosophy?	1
1.2 Two kinds of philosophy	2
1.3 Topics and methods	5
1.4 A contentious discipline	9
1.5 An atomistic theory	14
1.6 The charge of triviality	16
2 Outline of a Theory	19
2.1 Introduction	19
2.2 The ontological thesis	21
2.3 The epistemological thesis	25
2.4 The linguistic thesis	30
3 Meaning	33
3.1 The three-tier and Frege-Austin theories	33
3.2 Force	38
3.3 Propositions	41
3.4 A new theory of meaning	47
4 Being, Existence and Truth	55
4.1 Being and not-being	55
4.2 Existence and number	58
4.3 Truth and falsity	65
4.4 Appendix on 'not'	68

5 Time	72
5.1 Introduction	72
5.2 Time as an aspect of change	73
5.3 Time-travel, empty time and distance	78
5.4 Are there durationless instants?	83
5.5 Is time a fourth dimension?	86
5.6 The reality of time	91
6 Change and Causation	98
6.1 Introduction	98
6.2 Being and becoming	100
6.3 Causal agents, causal action, causal conditions	106
6.4 Causal action and matter	109
6.5 Causal continuity	116
6.6 Fundamental forces	117
6.7 Changes as explananda and explanantia	119
7 Teleology and Mental States	124
7.1 Theories of mental states	124
7.2 Action theories of belief and desire	127
7.3 Theories of teleological explanation	130
7.4 The action theory defended	134
8 Moral Concepts	140
8.1 Theories of good and evil	140
8.2 A taxonomy of reasons	146
8.3 Moral terms	157
9 Conceiving and Understanding	161
9.1 A holistic theory of thinking	161
9.2 Sortal concepts	163
9.3 Causal understanding	169
9.4 Teleological thinking	173
10 Consciousness	179
10.1 Introspection	179
10.2 Awareness of our bodies	182
10.3 Awareness of our minds	185

11 Thought and Philosophy	191
11.1 Two aspects of thinking	191
11.2 The physical and the psychological	195
11.3 Objects and changes	200
11.4 Conclusion	203
Technical Terms and Symbols	209
Bibliography	213
Index	218