

Table of contents

Acknowledgements	vii
The language of daily life in the history of English: Studying how macro meets micro	1
Minna Palander-Collin, Minna Nevala & Arja Nurmi
SECTION 1. Variation and social relations
Negotiating interpersonal identities in writing: Code-switching practices in Charles Burney's correspondence	27
Päivi Pahta & Arja Nurmi
Patterns of interaction: Self-mention and addressee inclusion in the letters of Nathaniel Bacon and his correspondents	53
Minna Palander-Collin
Referential terms and expressions in eighteenth-century letters: A case study on the Lunar men of Birmingham	75
Minna Nevala
SECTION 2. Methodological considerations in the study of change
Methodological and practical aspects of historical network analysis: A case study of the Bluestocking letters	107
Anni Sairio
Grasshoppers and blind beetles: Caregiver language in Early Modern English correspondence	137
Terttu Nevalainen
Lifespan changes in the language of three early modern gentlemen	165
Helena Raumolin-Brunberg
SECTION 3. Sociohistorical context
Singular YOU WAS/WERE variation and English normative grammars in the eighteenth century	199
Mikko Laitinen

Encountering and appropriating the Other: East India Company merchants and foreign terminology Samuli Kaislaniemi	219
Everyday possessions: Family and identity in the correspondence of John Paston II Teo Juvonen	253
APPENDIX. Editions in the Corpora of Early English Correspondence	279
Name index	303
Subject index	309