

CONTENTS

I. INTRODUCTION. MODERN PSYCHOLOGY AND THE MEDIEVAL PSYCHE	I
II. NEW RECRUITMENT—NEW PSYCHOLOGY	8
I. Adult recruitment	9
II. Psychological implications	12
III. The unpredictable St. Bernard	16
III. A BIBLICAL MASTER OF LOVE: SOLOMON	27
I. The Solomon of the Song of Songs, and others	27
II. A symbolic tradition	29
III. A spontaneous symbolism	33
IV. The school of the liturgy	37
V. A methodical formation	40
VI. From images to realities	44
VII. Different keys to interpretation	47
VIII. In the lineage of St. Bernard	54
IV. ANOTHER MASTER IN THE ART OF LOVING: OVID	62
I. Cicero, forerunner to Ovid	62
II. The Ovidian complex	64
III. Ovid and monks	66
IV. The secular's Ovid	69
V. The French Ovid	74
VI. Pagan writings and Holy Scripture	79

V. AGGRESSIVENESS OR REPRESSION IN ST. BERNARD AND IN HIS MONKS	86
I. Two levels of psyche in two forms of writings	86
II. Social aggressiveness as reflected in St. Bernard	88
III. Transformation of a desire for human love into a desire for union with God	99
IV. Conclusion. The oneness of the two psychic levels in St. Bernard	105
VI. CHAMPAGNE AS A GARDEN OF LOVE	109
I. The castles	109
II. The synagogue	110
III. The court	114
IV. The riddle of Andrew the Chaplain	115
V. Héloïse and the Paraclete	119
VI. St. Bernard and the Bride of the Song of Songs	121
VII. Erec and Enide	129
VII. EPILOGUE. BERNARD AND DANTE: THE BRIDE AND BEATRICE	137
I. Love and women	137
II. Two similar processes: personification and sublimation	138
III. Two similar results: renunciation and inte- gration	141
IV. Mary and the Eternal Feminine	142
INDEX	145