

Table of contents

Acknowledgements

IX

CHAPTER 1

Foundations

1

1. Some outcomes of language acquisition 1
2. The critical period hypothesis 9
 - 2.1 Cases of linguistic deprivation 12
 - 2.2 Delay of language acquisition in the deaf 14
 - 2.3 Creole genesis 15
3. Bilingual acquisition 17
4. Incomplete acquisition 20
5. Organization of the book 22

CHAPTER 2

Second language acquisition

27

1. Characteristics of adult second language acquisition 27
2. Process and outcome 30
 - 2.1 Prior language knowledge 30
 - 2.2 Persistent L1 influence as fossilization 34
3. Is there a critical period in L2 acquisition? 41
 - 3.1 The critical period position 43
 - 3.2 The no critical period position 49
 - 3.3 Summary 57
4. Age of acquisition and first language loss 59

CHAPTER 3

First language attrition in adults

63

1. Language attrition 64
 - 1.1 Factors contributing to attrition 65
 - 1.2 Linguistic process and outcome of attrition 65
 - 1.3 Baseline knowledge in language attrition research and other methodological considerations 68

2. Theoretical models of attrition 69
 - 2.1 The regression hypothesis 69
 - 2.2 The generative approach 75
 - 2.3 The activation threshold hypothesis 81
3. Cross linguistic influence (transfer) in L1 attrition and L2 acquisition 85
4. The age factor in L1 attrition 89

CHAPTER 4

Bilingualism in early childhood 93

1. Types of bilinguals 94
 - 1.1 Simultaneous bilingualism 94
 - 1.2 Sequential bilingualism 97
2. Unbalanced development in early childhood 99
 - 2.1 Language choices 100
 - 2.2 The weaker language 102
3. Attrition or incomplete acquisition? 107
 - 3.1 L1 attrition 109
 - 3.2 Incomplete L1 acquisition 111
 - 3.2.1 Morphosyntax 111
 - 3.2.2 Syntax-pragmatics interface 117
4. Total L1 loss? 120
5. On the nature of the weaker language 123
 - 5.1 The Weaker Language as L2 Hypothesis 123
 - 5.2 The Weaker Language as L1 Hypothesis 126

CHAPTER 5

Bilingualism in middle and late childhood 131

1. Language learning at school 132
 - 1.1 Monolingual children 132
 - 1.2 Bilingual children 136
2. L1 attrition in minority-language speaking children 139
 - 2.1 Inuktitut-speaking children in Eastern Canada 140
 - 2.2 Spanish-speaking children in American schools 141
 - 2.3 East Asian children and the role of community-based schools 147
 - 2.4 Children with no academic support of the minority language 150
3. Age effects in L1 loss as a function of L2 acquisition 152
4. Further research 158

Incomplete L1 acquisition in adults

161

1. Linguistic profile of adult heritage speakers 162
 - 1.1 L1 attrition vs. incomplete L1 acquisition 163
 - 1.2 Methodological considerations in the study of incomplete L1 acquisition in adults 165
2. Structural characteristics of the incomplete adult L1 grammar 167
 - 2.1 Phonology 168
 - 2.2 Inflectional morphology 171
 - 2.2.1 Nominal morphology: Case and gender agreement 171
 - 2.2.2 Verbal morphology: Agreement, tense, aspect and mood 174
 - 2.3 Syntax 182
 - 2.4 Lexicon 187
3. Incomplete L1 acquisition and age of onset of L2 acquisition 193
 - 3.1 Incomplete acquisition in simultaneous vs. sequential bilinguals 194
 - 3.2 L1 Loss in adult foreign adoptees 202
4. Conclusion 205

CHAPTER 7

Incomplete L1 and L2 acquisition in adults

207

1. Theoretical accounts of incomplete L2 acquisition 208
2. Some similarities between L2 and L1 incomplete acquisition 211
3. Heritage language acquisition 216
4. Research findings 222
 - 4.1 Selective advantages in grammatical knowledge 222
 - 4.2 Written vs. oral tasks and types of knowledge 231
 - 4.3 Reactivity to classroom instruction 240
5. Do heritage language learners have advantages over L2 learners? 247

CHAPTER 8

Implications

249

1. Complete vs. incomplete acquisition 250
 - 1.1 First language acquisition 251
 - 1.2 Second language acquisition 255
 - 1.3 Early bilingual acquisition 258

2. The role of age in language acquisition and language loss 262
3. The role of input in language acquisition and language loss 269
4. Future research 275

References	277
Index of authors	303
Index of terms	309