

Contents

Preface and Acknowledgments	vii
Introduction	xiii
The Nearest Thing to Being Lovable
1 “I Belong in Little Towns”	1
Anderson’s Provincial Postmodernism
2 The Interpretation of Dreams	24
Aesthetic Crises in “Hands”
3 Onanism in Eden	64
Loving and Hating Women in “Respectability”
4 Moving on Up and Staying There	88
The Social Success as Grotesque in “The Strength of God”
5 Enoch Robinson Is the Woman in the Shadows	125
The Critique of the Romantic Artist in “Loneliness”
6 Going All the Way When You Can’t Go Far	153
Sex, Class, and Identity in “Nobody Knows”
7 Men Are Stupid Critics; Women Are Discerning Artists	174
Notes	197
Works Cited	217
Index	220