

Table of Contents

Acknowledgments VII

Abbreviations XVII

Chapter 1: Introduction and the status quaestionis concerning the Diet of John the Baptist	1
A. Introduction: The Baptist's Diet in Synoptic Tradition	1
1. The Problem	1
2. "Locusts and Wild Honey" in Mark 1:6 and Matt 3:4	4
3. Other Synoptic Traditions Pertaining to John's Diet	7
a) The Question about Fasting (Mark 2:18 par.)	7
b) Q/Luke 7:31–35 and Q/Matt 11:16–19: John and Jesus	9
c) John the Nazarite (L/Luke 1:15b) in Relation to Q/Luke 7:31–35 and Q/Matt 11:16–19	10
d) Synoptic Traditions Pertaining to John's Diet: The Case against Harmonization	10
B. The status quaestionis (si autem est quaestio) concerning John the Baptist's Diet	12
1. Preliminary Observations concerning Locusts as Human Food: Erasmus, Wettstein, Bochart, Alford, Zahn, and Strack and Billerbeck	13
2. Form Criticism and John as Prophet: Dibelius (and Others)	16
3. John as Ascetic: McNeile, Gnilka, Pesch (and Others)	17
4. A 'Vegetarian' Historical Baptist? (Pallis, Kieferndorf and Eisler)	19
5. 'John within Judaism' as a Wilderness Dweller (Lohmeyer) or an Authoritative Hellenistic Herald (Windisch)	21
6. The 'No Significance' Interpretation: Kraeling, Yamasaki and Juel	24
7. Marxsen's Alternate Reconstruction of Tradition History	26
8. John and the Cuisine at Qumran: Filson, Davies and Charlesworth	27
9. John's Diet as a Recognized Problem: Andersen, Scobie, Vielhauer, Boismard and Böcher	28
10. John's 'Natural' Food: R. H. Smith, E. F. Lupieri and J. E. Taylor	32
11. Ulrich Luz on the History of Interpretation of Matt 3:4	33
12. John's 'Liberationist' Diet? (M. E. Boring, W. Carter and E. LaVerdiere) ..	33
13. Summation	34

Chapter 2: Locust/Grasshopper Eating in Ancient Near Eastern and Greco-Roman Antiquity	36
A. Introduction	36
B. Prolegomena: What is a ‘Locust’?	37
C. From Leviticus to Moses Maimonides: Locust Eating in Jewish Literature and the Ancient Near East	40
1. Overview: “Locusts” in the Hebrew Bible	40
2. The Prescription in Leviticus 11	43
3. Locust Eating in the Ancient Near East	46
4. Are Locusts Permitted? Lev 11:20–23 and Deut 14:19	49
5. The Letter of Aristeeas and Philo of Alexandria: Locusts as a Recognized Food in the Egyptian Jewish Diaspora	51
6. Conditional Affirmation of Locust Eating in the Dead Sea Scrolls	52
7. Locusts in the Mishnah: Like Fish, But Not Quite Fowl	54
8. Locust Eating in Later Jewish Literature: Midrashim and Maimonides	56
Excursus: Al-Damīrī on Locust Eating and Islam	59
9. Summation: Locust Eating in Jewish Literature	59
D. Locustae classicae : Depictions of Locust Eaters and Locust Eating in Greco-Roman Antiquity	60
1. Early References to Locusts/Grasshoppers	62
2. Herodotus: Historian and Ethnographer of Locust Eaters	62
3. Aristophanes: The Humor of Grasshopper Eating	62
4. Locusts as Bird Food and Fish Bait	63
5. Locusts as a Food for Poor People: Alexis and Aesop	64
6. Aristotle: Philosopher, Acridologist and Locust Eater	65
7. Ethnographic Depictions of Locust Eaters: Diodorus Siculus, Strabo and the Elder Pliny	67
a) Diodorus Siculus, Agatharchides and Aristophanes of Byzantium	68
b) Strabo: Reworking Traditional Ethnographic Material	71
c) Pliny the Elder’s Rendition of This Locust-Eating People	72
8. Additional Expressions of Aversion to Locust Eating: Plutarch, Athenaeus, Galen, Dioscorides, Pseudo-Dioscorides, Oribasius, and a Later Fable of Aesop	74
a) Plutarch’s Aversion and Dio Chrysostom’s Apology	74
b) Athenaeus’s Aversion	74
c) The Use of Locusts for Medicinal Purposes (Rather than Regular Human Food): Galen, Dioscorides, Pseudo-Dioscorides and Oribasius ...	75
d) A Later Fable from the Fables of Aesop	77
9. Tertullian on the Delight of Marcionite Christians in Locusts as Food	77

10. The Witness of Jerome to a Plurality of Sentiments about Locust Eating	78
11. Conclusion: Locust Eating during the Classical and Hellenistic Periods, and the Aversion to Locust Eating that Began with the Roman Period	79

Chapter 3: The Baptist's "Wild Honey"	81
A. Prolegomena: Defining "Honey"	81
B. "Honey" Produced by Bees	83
1. Introduction: The Late Arrival of Apiculture in Palestine	83
2. Cultivated Bee Honey in the Hebrew Bible?	84
3. The Proscription against Bee Eating at Qumran	85
4. Philo of Alexandria: Explaining the Uncleaness of Bees	86
5. Honey in Josephus and the Mishnah	88
6. The Potential Dangers of Consuming 'Wild Honey'	88
a) Xenophon and Ps. Aristotle: Hapless Honey	89
b) Strabo: "Maddening Honey"	89
c) Pliny and Columella: "Maddening Honey" and Third-Rate 'Wild Honey'	90
7. Is Bee Honey a 'Food'?	92
C. "Honey" Derived from Trees	93
1. Plentiful "Wild Honey" in a Pleasing Beverage: Diodorus and Pliny	93
2. Early Witnesses to Designating Tree Sap as 'Honey'	94
3. Additional References to 'Honey' from Trees: Euripides, Aristeas , Virgil, Sibylline Oracles 3 and 5, Second Enoch , Aelian and Galen	95
D. Conclusion: The Baptist's "Wild Honey"	97

Chapter 4: "Locusts and Wild Honey" in the Synoptic Interpretation: The Historical Baptist, Mark, Matthew (and Luke)	100
A. The Historical Baptist's "Locusts and Wild Honey"	100
1. Introduction: Present-Day Locust Eaters	101
2. Locust Eating in the Great Basin of North America and Elsewhere in Our World Today	101
3. The Collection and Preservation of Locusts	104
Excursus: Why Not Eat Locusts Today?	107

4. The Nutritional Value of “Locusts and Wild Honey”	108
a) Approximating What John Needed to Sustain Life in the Wilderness ...	108
i) Prolegomena	109
ii) Estimating John’s Nutritional Needs	109
b) The Caloric and Nutrient Contents of “Locusts and Wild Honey”	112
i) Locusts and Protein	112
ii) ‘Wild Honey’s’ and Carbohydrates	113
a’) Bee Honey	114
b’) Date Honey	115
c’) Fig Honey	116
d’) Honey-Water	116
e’) Conclusion: ‘Wild Honey’s’ and Carbohydrates	116
iii) The Risk of Scurvy: Vitamins and Minerals in “Locusts and Wild Honey”	117
c) Summation: John’s Diet in Light of Empirical Data on Human Nutrition	117
5. The Historical Baptist’s Likely Response to His Commemoration in Mark 1:6c Matt 3:4c	118
B. John as Wilderness Herald: Mark 1:6c	121
C. John as a Bonafide Wilderness Survivor: Matt 3:4c	124
1. From Mark’s Wilderness Confirmation to Matthew’s (and Luke’s) Wilderness Assumption(s)	124
2. Matt 3:4c and Reports of Other Judean Wilderness Survivors	125
a) The Survival of Judas Maccabeus and Others in the Wilderness	125
b) The Survival of “Isaiah” and Other Prophets in the Wilderness	126
c) Bannus’s Natural Wilderness Clothing and Food	126
3. Conclusion: Why Matthew Thus Edited Mark 1:6c	127
D. Luke’s Omission of Mark 1:6: The Baptist, Jesus and Elijah	129
1. The Return of Elijah: John or Jesus?	129
2. An Explanation for Luke’s Omission of Mark 1:6	130
E. Summation: ΑΚΡΙΑΕΣ ΚΑΙ ΜΕΛΙ ΑΓΡΙΟΝ in Synoptic Interpretation	132
 Chapter 5: John’s Diet as ‘Vegetarian’ and a Model of Asceticism: ‘Locusts,’ Wild Honey and the imitatio Iohannis in Patristic and Subsequent Christian Interpretation
A. Models of Interpretation	135
1. Overview	135
2. Complementary Tendencies	136

B. Early Interpretations of the Baptist's Diet	137
1. Justin Martyr: A Matthean Characterization of John's Diet	137
2. The 'Vegetarian' Depiction of John's Diet in the Gospel of the Ebionites ..	139
C. Tatian's Diatessaron : An Additional Second-Century 'Vegetarian' Depiction of the Baptist's Diet?	141
1. Īšo'dād of Merv's Witness to the Diatessaron ("Honey and Milk")	141
2. Bar-Ṣalibi's Witness to the Diatessaron ("Milk and Honey")	142
3. Bar-Hebraeus's and Ibn aṭ-Ṭayyib's Witnesses to the Diatessaron ("Milk and Honey")	143
4. Analysis: The Diatessaron and the Baptist's "Milk"	144
a) Analogous Characterizations of Meat Eating as Evil: Aratus and Tatian ..	145
b) Did the Diatessaron Originally Attribute to John a Diet of "Honey and Milk"?	147
D. Figurative and Allegorical Interpretations of John's Diet	148
1. Origen: The Distinctiveness of John's Diet and Its Meaning	149
2. Other Figurative Interpretations of John's Diet: Cyril of Jerusalem, Hilary of Poitiers, Arnobius the Younger and Peter Chrysologus	150
3. Analysis: Unity and Diversity among Figurative Interpretations	152
E. Eastern Witnesses to John's Diet as a Model for Others	153
1. Clement of Alexandria: John's Temperance Prepares the Way for Jesus' Followers	153
2. Methodius of Olympus: John's Purity and Distinction "among Those Born of Women"	154
3. Cyril of Alexandria: John as Prophet Calling Others to Repentance	155
4. Gregory Nazianzen: Following Elijah and John into the Wilderness	157
5. Basil of Caesarea: Summoning a Plethora of Biblical and Early Christian Precedents for Wilderness Habitation	158
6. Gregory of Nyssa: Following the Example of "Paul's" Hermeneutics	160
7. Didymus the Blind: Identifying the Baptist in Psalm 28 (LXX)	161
8. John Chrysostom: Linking the Baptist's Diet to Eschatology and Virginité ...	162
9. The Variety of Interpretations Attributed to Pseudo-Chrysostom(s)	164
10. Hesychius of Jerusalem: The Simplicity of Eating Raw Locusts	165
F. Western Witnesses to John's Diet as a Model for Others	165
1. Ambrose of Milan and Chromatius of Aquileia	166
2. Augustine: The Potential Temptation of Yearning to Eat Meat	167
3. Jerome's Witness to Those Who Imitated John and Instructions to Others Who Should	168

G. ‘Vegetarian’ Interpretations of John’s ‘Locusts’	171
1. Athanasius of Alexandria: A Proof-text for (Re)interpreting ΑΚΡΙΣ	172
2. Isidore of Pelusium: Imitating the ‘Vegetarian’ John	173
3. The Baptist’s ‘Vegetarian’ Diet in Syriac Christianity	174
4. The Possible Syriac Roots of “Roots” in Slavonic Josephus	176
5. Disparate Interpretations in Theophylactus of Ochrida’s Commentaries on Matthew and Mark	177
6. Euthymius Zigabenus: A Debate Decided in Favor of a ‘Vegetarian’ Interpretation of John’s ‘Locusts’	178
Excursus: From Elijah’s Angelic Visitor to John’s Eucharistic Provision: The Vision of Mechtild of Magdeburg	179
7. Meletios Pigas: The Wilderness Habitation and ‘Vegetarian’ Diet of Silvestros, a Sixteenth-Century Patriarch of Alexandria	180
8. Alexis, Origen and J.-P. Migne: Emendations of Classical and Patristic Texts Mentioning “Locusts”	181
H. Why a ‘Vegetarian’ Baptist, a Model of Asceticism, or Both? ΠΑΙΔΕΙΑ and Early Christian Biblical Interpretation	183
I. Later Reactions and Protests to Construing John as ‘Vegetarian’ or an Exemplar	186
1. John Calvin: The Baptist’s Natural, Non-ascetic Food	187
2. Affirming that John Ate Actual Locusts/Grasshoppers: Bochart and Browne	188
J. The Tenacity of ‘Vegetarian’ Interpretations: Alexander Ross and Ellen Gould Harmon White	189
K. Summation: The Baptist’s “Locusts and Wild Honey” in Patristic and Later Interpretation	191

Epilogue: “Locusts and Wild Honey” in Retrospect:
ΠΑΙΔΕΙΑ and Early Christian Biblical Interpretation

A. Summation of Chapters 1–5	195
B. Methodological Observations: Implications of the Present Inquiry for New Testament and Early Christian Studies	199
1. The Ongoing Need for Philological Refinement	199
2. Argument and Elucidation	200
3. Method and Eclecticism	200

C. Avenues for Future Inquiry	201
1. The Historical Baptist and the Historical Jesus	201
2. John the Baptist in Patristic Interpretation	202
3. Scripture Construed as a Source of Early Christian ΠΑΙΔΕΙΑ	203
4. Food, Culture and Theology	204
Bibliography	207
Indices	235