

Table of contents

Editors' Preface	v
Introduction Andreas Dufter, Jürg Fleischer and Guido Seiler	1
Parameter-based and Minimalist approaches
Methodological considerations on grammar variation. The right periphery as an OV/VO deciding parameter more so than the left periphery: Gradience in the verb cluster Werner Abraham	21
Variation as lexical choice: have, got and the expression of possession Faye Chalcraft	59
Variation in Icelandic morphosyntax Þórhallur Eythórsson and Jóhannes Gísli Jónsson	81
Constraint-based approaches
The predicative as a source of grammatical variation Judith Berman	99
Morphological variation: A declarative approach Martin Neef	117
Different notions of variation and their reflexes in Swiss German relativization Martin Salzmann	135
From documentation to grammatical description: Prepositional phrases in Ruhrdeutsch René Schiering	163

Usage-based, construction-based and statistical approaches

Can we factor out free choice? Bert Cappelle	183
Empirical syntax: Idiolectal variability in two- and three-verb clusters in regional standard Dutch and Dutch dialects Leonie Cornips	203
Towards a multivariate model of grammar: The case of word order variation in Dutch clause final verb clusters Gert de Sutter	225
Transplanted dialects and language change: Question formation in Québec Martin Elsig and Shana Poplack	255
Agreement in English dialects Verena Haser and Bernd Kortmann	271
Semi-modal variation Katarina Klein	297
Variation in Komi object marking Gerson Klumpp	325
How lexicalization reflected in hyphenation affects variation and word-formation Britta Mondorf	361
Variation in German adjective inflection: A corpus study Said Sahel	389
Index	407