

Contents

Introduction	1
1 Being Aware and Active	7
1.1 Awareness	7
1.2 Activity	8
1.3 Reflectivity	11
1.4 Persons	14
1.5 Unity of the Person	15
1.6 Past, Present, and Future	16
Summary	19
2 Wanting and Believing	21
2.1 Wants	21
2.2 Pleasure and Pain	24
2.3 Beliefs	28
2.4 Parallels and Interplay Between Wants and Beliefs	31
2.5 Moral Wants and Beliefs	32
Summary	33
3 Feeling	35
3.1 General Characteristics of Feelings	35
3.2 Reflectivity of Feelings	37
3.3 Strength of Feelings	38
3.4 Positive Feelings	41
3.5 Negative Feelings	43
Summary	48
4 Acting	49
4.1 The General Conditions of Acting	49
4.2 The Conditions of Can	49
4.3 The Conditions of Trying	52
Summary	54

5	Characteristics of Persons	55
5.1	Wants	55
5.2	Respect	55
5.3	Care	57
5.4	Understanding	59
5.5	Control	61
5.6	Beliefs About Existence	65
5.7	Beliefs About a Shared Conceptual System of Psychology	66
	Summary	68
6	Personal Change	69
6.1	Types of Change	69
6.2	Open and Closed Systems	72
6.3	Changes in Acting	76
6.4	Changes in Can	76
6.5	Changes in Trying	77
6.6	Changes in Determinants of Trying	78
6.7	Change of Feeling	79
6.8	Changes in Subjective Identity	83
	Summary	84
7	Interacting	85
7.1	Some Elementary General Concepts	85
7.2	Taxonomy of Two-Person Interactions in Terms of the Control Concept	88
7.3	Cases of Interaction	89
	Summary	102
8	Epilogue	103
8.1	Is the System Transcultural?	103
8.2	Is the System Stable?	104
8.3	How Does the System Relate to the Empirical Tradition in Psychology?	104
	Appendix 1 Definitions of the System	107
	Appendix 2 Axioms of the System	109
	Appendix 3 Some Earlier Presentations, Critiques and Replies Concerning the Present Type of Approach	111