

Contents

Acknowledgements

ix

1	Introduction: Critical Social Theory and the End of Work	1
	Critical Theory	1
	Critical Theory and critical social theory	4
	The meaning of the end of work	5
	Work	6
	Scope of the book	7
	Outline of the chapters	7
2	The Beginning of the End of Work	9
	Introduction	9
	Definitions of work	9
	Work in nonindustrial society	12
	Historical conceptions of work	14
	Industrialisation and the rise of work	21
	Conclusion	29
3	Industrialism, Utopia, and the End of Work	31
	More's Utopia	32
	The play of the passions: Fourier's utopia	34
	Etzler's technological utopia	40
	Bellamy: Work in the rational society	43
	The work of art and the art of work: William Morris	47
	Conclusion	49
4	Marx and the End of Work	51
	Introduction	51
	Work as the human essence	52
	Aesthetics and affirmation in work	54
	Marx's critique of work under capitalism	56
	Machinery, value and the transformation of work	58
	Marx, the end of work and the politics of time	64
	Conclusion	66

5	Marcuse: Needs and Potentialities in the Age of Automation	69
	Introduction	69
	Marcuse, needs, and the human essence	70
	Work and Eros	73
	Eros and automation	76
	Work in one dimensional society	79
	Work and aesthetics in Marcuse	82
	Marcuse and the new sensibility	86
	Conclusion	88
6	The Future of Work and Leisure	93
	Introduction	93
	Automation, the affluent society and the future of work	96
	Futurology and revolution: Towards the year 2000	99
	The future of work in postindustrial society	102
	The revolt against the work ethic and the revenge of work	103
	The end of work, or work resurgent?	107
	Conclusion	109
7	André Gorz: Postindustrial Marxism and the End of Work	113
	Introduction: Gorz in intellectual context	113
	Gorz's changing theoretical perspective?	114
	The end of work, a strategy for labour	115
	Post scarcity society and the new sensibility	118
	Reduction of work in Strategy and beyond	120
	The unfulfilled potential of capitalist technology	121
	From alienation to heteronomy, the end of work in the electronic era	122
	New social subjects: The non working non class	124
	Gorz and Negri on immaterial labour	126
	Living dead capitalism and the ghost of work	131
	Conclusion	133
8	Sociology and the End of Work: Classical, Cultural and Critical Theories	135
	Introduction	135
	The categorisation of social thought	135
	The establishment of work as sociological category	136
	Offe and the decline of work: Heterogenisation and rationality	138
	The debate over the work ethic: Taylorisation, morality and necessity	139
	Increasing unemployment, decreasing work time	140
	A note on Bauman and the work ethic	142
	The end of the industrial community?	143
	Habermas: work and rationality in the administered society	144
	Social change, system integration and the obsolescence of work	147

	The sociological shift	149
	From production to consumption	150
	Baudrillard: Shattering the Mirror of Production	151
	New Times and cultural studies: Consumption as resistance	154
	Cultural studies in New Times: A critique of consumption as resistance	156
	Conclusion: Consumer society and one dimensional thought	161
9	Travail sans frontières: Globalisation and the End of Work	165
	Introduction	165
	Globalisation in perspective	165
	Defining globalisation	166
	Capital, labour, globalisation	167
	The white heat of neoliberalism; globalisation and the West	168
	Exporting jobs, individualising risk	169
	Deregulate and punish: work under neoliberal globalisation	171
	Conclusion: work in the global South	176
10	Conclusion: The End of Work as Critical Social Theory	179
	References	185
	Index	199