

Contents

1.	Introduction: Thomas Pynchon, Mason &amp; Dixon , the State of Research, and Questions of Intention, Method, and Approach	9
2.1	Between Fact and Fancy: A Short History of Historiography	29
2.2	From 'Fiction' to 'Historiographic Metafiction': An Attempt at Definition	47
2.3.1	Reinventing the Eighteenth-Century Novel: Self-Reflexivity and (In)authenticity in Barth, Jong, Boyle, and Pynchon	62
2.3.2	Between Historiographical Pluralism and Individual Historiography: 'Storifying' the Past in Mason &amp; Dixon	83
2.3.3	From Cherrycoke to Möbius: Anachronisms, Floating Identities, and the Conflation of Narrative Levels in Mason &amp; Dixon	105
3.1	Approaching the Novel's Conceptual Structure: Binarity, Balance, and Complementarity in Mason &amp; Dixon	127
3.2	From Mason and Dixon to Watson and Crick: Disclosing the Helical Configuration of Mason &amp; Dixon	156
4.1	Between Divergent Critical Views and 'Anti-Paranoia': Color Imagery, Holy Fools, and Local Varieties of Paranoia in Mason &amp; Dixon	197
4.2	From Inverted Pentacles to 'Creative Paranoia': Chaos Theory, Other-Directedness, and The Invisible Hand in Mason &amp; Dixon	231
5.	Conclusion: Drawing Together the Unraveled Strands of Mason &amp; Dixon	269
6.	Bibliography	273