

Contents

CONTRIBUTORS xi

INTRODUCTION: You've Got to Be Jazzistic 1

i So Black and Blue: Music, Image, Identity

ONE "You Ain't Got to Be Black to Be Black": Music, Race Consciousness, and Identity in The Autobiography of an Ex-Colored Man and Mojo Hand
Nick Heffernan 21

TWO Blackface Minstrelsy and Jazz Signification in Hollywood's Early Sound Era Corin Willis 40

ii Paging the Devil: Jazz and Blues Poetics

THREE "Thanks, Jack, for That": The Strange Legacies of Sterling A. Brown
Steven C. Tracy 65

FOUR Phraseology: An Interview with Michael S.
Harper 80

FIVE Paul Beatty's White Boy Shuffle Blues: Jazz Poetry, John Coltrane, and the Post-Soul Aesthetic
Bertram D. Ashe 106

SIX Giving Voice: An Interview with Jayne Cortez 124

SEVEN "Out of This World": Music and Spirit in the Writings of Nathaniel Mackey and Amiri Baraka David Murray 141

iii Until the Real Thing: Biography, Autobiography, and Other Fictions

EIGHT Blaxploitation Bird: Ross Russell's Pulp Addiction
John Gennari 163

NINE How Many Miles? Alternate Takes on the Jazz Life
Krin Gabbard 184

iv Second Balcony Jump: Unsettling the Score

TEN "A Rebus of Democratic Slants and Angles": To Have and Have Not, Racial Representation, and Musical Performance in a Democracy at War
Ian Brookes 203

ELEVEN "No Brotherly Love": Hollywood Jazz, Racial Prejudice, and John Lewis's Score for Odds Against Tomorrow
David Butler 221

TWELVE Anatomy of a Movie: Duke Ellington and 1950s Film Scoring Mervyn Cooke 240

v Criss Cross: Jazzisticologies

THIRTEEN Jumping Tracks: The Path of Conduction
Michael Jarrett 263

COPYRIGHT ACKNOWLEDGMENTS 283

INDEX 285