

Contents

Preface ix

Chapter one	The study of human behavior	2
	Interest in human behavior, 3. The science of psychology, 5. Traditional views of the nature of science, 5. Some newer conceptions of science, 14. Science and value, 19. What psychology is, 20. Psychology and other sciences, 23. Summary, 26.
Part one	The person and social influences
Chapter two	The nature of personality	30
	Definitions of personality and of theory, 30. Psychoanalytic theories of personality, 32. Learning theory approaches to personality, 39. Trait and type theories, 41. Holistic and organismic approaches, 47. Areas of agreement among personality theorists, 50. Summary, 52.
Chapter three	Defensive and coping behavior	54
	The universality of coping behavior, 54. Nature of coping behavior, 55. What is the self?, 58. Identification and ego-involvement, 64. Self-consistency and self-rejection, 67. Defense of the self, 68. Mechanisms of self-defense, 71. Self-defense and mental disorder, 81. Nondefensive coping behavior, 85. Summary, 87.
Chapter four	Social and cultural factors in personality	90
	Cultural variations in behavior, 90. Social roles and personality, 96. Sex roles and personality, 97. Social class and personality, 99. Psychological effects of discrimination, 103. Summary, 106.
Chapter five	Attitudes, beliefs, and prejudices	108
	The nature of attitudes and belief systems, 108. Techniques of attitude measurement, 112. Forming our attitudes and beliefs, 115. Changing attitudes, 118. Prejudices, 124. Summary, 129.
Part two	Biological factors in behavior
Chapter six	Heredity and environment	134
	Relation between heredity and environment, 134. Heredity, 137. Maturation, 149. Environment, 151. Interaction of heredity and environment, 155. Summary, 160.

Chapter seven	Physiological aspects of behavior	162
	The nervous system, 163. The brain, 166. Neurons (nerve cells), 170. Function of the nervous system, 172. The internal environment, 174. The internal environment, 174. The interdisciplinary approach, 180. Conclusion, 181. Summary, 181.
Chapter eight	The senses	184
	Vision, 186. Hearing (audition), 197. The other senses, 203. Interrelation of the senses, 210. Summary, 210.
Part three	Basic psychological processes
Chapter nine	Perceiving the world	214
	The nature of perception, 214. The strategy of perceiving, 219. Stimulus factors in perception, 223. Personal factors in perception, 232. Conclusion, 237. Summary, 238.
Chapter ten	Conditioned response learning	240
	Classical conditioning, 242. Operant conditioning, 250. Aversive conditioning, 258. Summary, 262.
Chapter eleven	Other aspects of learning	264
	Perceptual-motor learning, 264. Learning and remembering, 273. Transfer of training, 282. Summary, 285.
Chapter twelve	Thinking	288
	Problem solving, 288. Attaining concepts, 295. Language and cognitive processes, 300. Summary, 306.
Chapter thirteen	Motivation and emotion	308
	Physiological drives, 309. Social motives, 319. Theories of motivation, 322. General ways of motivating others, 324. The nature of emotion, 326. Three aspects of emotion, 332. Summary, 338.
Part four	Individual differences in behavior
Chapter fourteen	Quantitative aspects of psychology	342
	Psychological measurement, 343. Criteria for measurement, 347. Frequency distributions, 349. Measures of central tendency, 355. Measures of variability, 356. Scaled scores, 358. Measures of correlation, 360. Summary, 364.
Chapter fifteen	Psychological tests	366
	History of testing, 268. Individual measures of intelligence, 371. Aptitude tests, 378. Scholastic aptitude tests, 381. Interest inventories, 382. Personality inventories, 384. Projective techniques, 387. Achievement tests, 389. The present state of psychological tests, 390. Summary and conclusions, 391.

Chapter sixteen	Evaluating the individual	394
	Ordinary observation and the appraisal of others, 397. Psychological tests in appraisal and evaluation, 398. Rating methods of appraisal, 401. The interview in appraisal, 407. Summary, 411.
Chapter seventeen	Leadership and contemporary problems	414
	Leadership, 415. Student activism, 430. Ecology, 434. Summary, 438.
Chapter eighteen	The profession of psychologist	442
	Psychology and the professions, 443. The organization of psychology in the United States, 445. The professional psychologist, 449. Some current concerns of psychology, 457. Summary, 460.
	Glossary	463
	Index	483