

CONTENTS

Introduction	Psychological science and human understanding
Part One	1 Habit—the unit of behavior
	2 William James, Habit
	12 Clark L. Hull, Knowledge and purpose as habit mechanisms
Part Two	21 Energizing behavior—needs and motives
	22 John W. Atkinson, Motivational determinants of risk-taking behavior
	33 Robert W. White, Motivation reconsidered: the concept of competence
	58 Seymour Feshbach, The drive-reducing function of fantasy behavior
	67 Janet A. Taylor, A personality scale of manifest anxiety
Part Three	75 Learning personality traits
	76 I. E. Farber, Response fixation under anxiety and non-anxiety conditions
	90 Charles McArthur, Personality differences between middle and upper classes
	98 J. Stacy Adams and A. Kimball Romney, A functional analysis of authority
Part Four	113 The programing of human learning
	114 B. F. Skinner, Teaching machines
	126 Sidney L. Pressey, Teaching machine (and learning theory) crisis
Part Five	131 The assessment of behavior
	132 Paul E. Meehl, The cognitive activity of the clinician
	141 J. McV. Hunt, Experience and the development of motivation: some reinterpretations
Part Six	151 Two routes of science
	152 Lee J. Cronbach, The two disciplines of scientific psychology
	169 References