

Acknowledgments	vii
A Note on Citations	ix
Prologue: Gibson's Vision	1
I. Toward the Visual World
1. The Early Years, 1904–1931	15
2. Descartes's Legacy and Gibson's Challenge	26
3. The Motives of a Social Realist	47
4. From the Motor Theory of Perception to the Perceptual Control of Action	67
II. A Revolution in Vision
5. Transformations of an American Psychologist, 1931–1955	91
6. The Unmaking of a Social Psychologist, 1941–1955	105
7. The Discovery of the Living Retinal Image	114
8. Exploring the Visual World	137
9. From the Retinal Image to the Optic Array	152
10. The Discovery of Perceptual Learning and Activity	181
III. The Seer of Ithaca
11. The Seer of Ithaca: Cornell, 1955–1979	205
12. A Revolution in Science: The Senses Considered as Perceptual Systems	220
13. Image and Information	239
14. To See What Persists	260
15. The Ecological Approach to Visual Perception	279
16. New Vistas for Psychology	296

Epilogue: “Vision Is a Strange and Wonderful Business”	313
References	321
Index	343