

Contents

	List of illustrations	page viii
	Acknowledgments	x
	Part I Introduction	1
1	Bodies: actors and artistic agency on the nineteenth-century stage	13
2	Voices: oratory, expression, and the text/performance split	58
3	Words: copyright and the creation of the performance “text”	84
	Part II Introduction	111
4	The “unconscious autobiography” of Eugene O’Neill	123
5	Elmer Rice and the cinematic imagination	155
6	“I love a parade!”: John Howard Lawson’s minstrel burlesque of the American Dream	188
7	Sophie Treadwell’s “pretty hands”	211
	Epilogue: “modern times”	239
	Notes	247
	Works cited	278
	Index	293

Illustrations

1	Delsarte's "Criterion of the Eyes"	page 44
2	Delsarte's "Criterion of the Hand"	45
3	Delsarte's "Criterion of the Legs"	46
4	An 1897 advertisement for the "Graphophone"	59
5	Scene 5 from Eugene O'Neill's The Emperor Jones Photo courtesy of the Yale Collection of American Literature, Beinecke Library	134
6	Scene 5 from Eugene O'Neill's The Hairy Ape Photo courtesy of the Yale Collection of American Literature, Beinecke Library	146
7	Louis Wolheim as "Yank" in Eugene O'Neill's The Hairy Ape Photo courtesy of the Yale Collection of American Literature, Beinecke Library	150
8	Scene 3 from Elmer Rice's The Adding Machine Photo courtesy of the Yale Collection of American Literature, Beinecke Library	161
9	Dudley Digges as "Mr. Zero" in scene 7 from Elmer Rice's The Adding Machine Photo courtesy of the Yale Collection of American Literature, Beinecke Library	177
10	Act 1 from John Howard Lawson's Processional Photo courtesy of the Billy Rose Performing Arts Collection at the New York Public Library, Astor, Lenox and Tilden Foundations	193
11	Episode 1, "To Business," from Sophie Treadwell's Machinal Photo courtesy of the Billy Rose Performing Arts Collection at the New York Public Library, Astor, Lenox and Tilden Foundations	214

- 12 Episode 6, "Intimate," from Sophie Treadwell's Machinal
Photo courtesy of the Billy Rose Performing Arts Collection
at the New York Public Library, Astor, Lenox and Tilden Foundations