FOREWORD BY M. WERTHEIMER	v
ACKNOWLEDGMENTS	ix
I. THE FIELD OF RESEARCH	3
Distinction between meaningful and senseless learning (5).—A preliminary experiment (9).—Historical background (20)
II. EXPERIMENTS ON TWO PROCESSES OF LEARNING	32
A card-trick experiment (34).—Preliminary survey of results (44).—A quantitative experiment (45).—Qualitative analysis (50)
III. INTRODUCTION TO THE PROBLEM OF TRANSFER OF TRAINING	55
The problem (55).—Search for methods of teaching, I (58).—Digression: sensory organization (65).—Search for methods of teaching, II (73).—The match tasks (80)
IV. EXPERIMENTS CONCERNING TRANSFER OF TRAINING	81
Experiment A (82).—Individual experiments (87).—Experiment B (91).—Experiment C (102).—Experiment D (105)
V. THEORY OF TRANSFER OF TRAINING	108
Direct practice (108).—The doctrine of identical elements (111).—Learning by understanding (115).—"Carrying over" or "applying" (127)
VI. FORGETTING AND THE EFFECT OF REPETITION	137
The curve of forgetting (137).—Practice versus forgetting (144).—The concept of repetition (156)
VII. GROUPING AND LEARNING	164
Artificial grouping (164).—Grouping according to an arrangement (176).—Different forms of grouping (187)
VIII. MEMORY TRACES	193
Structural traces (195).—Individual traces (199)
IX. RETENTION OF PRINCIPLES AND FACTS	205
Forgetting and the qualities of the traces (205).—Experiments on the differences in retention (207).—Availability and embeddedness (221)

X. THE PROTOTYPE OF LEARNING	232
"Senseless" and "meaningful" (232).—The role of past experience (236).—One or two kinds of learning (246)
CONCLUSION: EDUCATIONAL IMPLICATIONS	254
APPENDICES
1. DETAILS OF EXPERIMENTS	263
2. STATISTICS ON TRANSFER OF TRAINING	269
3. GROUPING OF NONSENSE SYLLABLES	283
4. REMARKS CONCERNING THE HISTORY OF THE TRACE CONCEPT	288
5. THE LEARNER AND HIS ATTITUDES	296
