
Table of Contents

PREFACE ix

1: ORIGINS AND RELATIONSHIPS 1

- Preludes to modern cognitive psychology 1
- Five years in the fifties 7
- Psychology and the other cognitive sciences 10
 - Representation and process
 - The domains of the cognitive sciences
- What is cognitive psychology? 17
 - What is not cognitive psychology?
 - Criticisms of cognitive psychology
- Method and psychology 23

2: THE STRUCTURE AND FUNCTION OF MIND 27

- An interpretation of mind 27
- Minds and bodies 28
- Representation and process 31
 - Schemas as representational systems
- World and mind: Different structures 38
- Action 41
- Divergencies, directions, and dialectics 46

3: CONSCIOUSNESS 51

- The problem of private experiences 55
- The construction of conscious experience 57
- When are we conscious and what are we conscious of? 59
- Consciousness and introspection 63
- The limitation of conscious experience 65
- The adaptive functions of consciousness 70
- Imagery and consciousness 73
- Consequences of consciousness 75
- The uses of consciousness 81
- Attention 83
- Consciousness and psychoanalytic theory 85

4: PAST AND FUTURE DIRECTIONS 89

- Human information processing 90
- Memory 92
 - Reminding, recalling, recognizing: Different Memories?
 - Reminding, in amnesia and elsewhere
 - Recalling and recognizing
 - Short and long term memories
 - Episodic and semantic memories
- Learning 108
 - The challenge of conditioning
- Emotion 113
 - The construction of emotion
- Psychology and human experience 119

REFERENCES 123

NAME INDEX 137

SUBJECT INDEX 141