

Contents

Preface: Why Hypertext 3.0? xi

Acknowledgments xv

1

Hypertext: An Introduction

Hypertextual Derrida, Poststructuralist Nelson? 1 / The Definition of Hypertext and Its History as a Concept 2 / Very Active Readers 6 / Vannevar Bush and the Memex 9 / Forms of Linking, Their Uses and Limitations 13 / Linking in Open Hypermedia Systems: Vannevar Bush Walks the Web 22 / Hypertext without Links? 27 / The Place of Hypertext in the History of Information Technology 29 / Interactive or Ergodic? 41 / Baudrillard, Binariness, and the Digital 43 / Books Are Technology, Too 46 / Analogues to the Gutenberg Revolution 49

2

Hypertext and Critical Theory

Textual Openness 53 / Hypertext and Intertextuality 55 / Hypertext and Multivocality 56 / Hypertext and Decentering 56 / Hypertext as Rhizome 58 / The Nonlinear Model of the Network in Current Critical Theory 62 / Cause or Convergence, Influence or Confluence? 65

3

Reconfiguring the Text

From Text to Hypertext 69 / The In Memoriam Web 71 / New Forms of Discursive Prose—Academic Writing and Weblogs 77 / Problems with Terminology: What Is the Object We Read, and What Is a Text in Hypertext? 82 / Visual Elements in Print Text 85 / Animated Text 89 / Stretchtext 93 / The Dispersed Text 98 / Hypertextual Translation of

CONTENTS

Scribal Culture 99 / A Third Convergence: Hypertext and Theories of Scholarly Editing 102 / Hypertext, Scholarly Annotation, and the Electronic Scholarly Edition 103 / Hypertext and the Problem of Text Structure 107 / Argumentation, Organization, and Rhetoric 109 / Beginnings in the Open Text 110 / Endings in the Open Text 112 / Boundaries of the Open Text 113 / The Status of the Text, Status in the Text 118 / Hypertext and Decentrality: The Philosophical Grounding 123

4

Reconfiguring the Author

Erosion of the Self 125 / How the Print Author Differs from the Hypertext Author 131 / Virtual Presence 135 / Collaborative Writing, Collaborative Authorship 136 / Examples of Collaboration in Hypertext 142

5

Reconfiguring Writing

The Problematic Concept of Disorientation 144 / The Concept of Disorientation in the Humanities 146 / The Love of Possibilities 148 / The Rhetoric and Stylistics of Writing for E-Space; or, How Should We Write Hypertext? 151 / Hypertext as Collage Writing 188 / Is This Hypertext Any Good? Or, How Do We Evaluate Quality in Hypermedia? 198

6

Reconfiguring Narrative

Approaches to Hypertext Fiction—Some Opening Remarks 215 / Hypertext and the Aristotelian Conception of Plot 218 / Quasi-Hypertextuality in Print Texts 219 / Answering Aristotle: Hypertext and the Nonlinear Plot 221 / Print Anticipations of Multilinear Narratives in E-Space 223 / Narrative Beginnings and Endings 226 / Michael Joyce's afternoon 229 / Stitching Together Narrative, Sexuality, Self: Shelley Jackson's Patchwork Girl 234 / Quibbling: A Feminist Rhizome Narrative 242 / Storyworlds and Other Forms of Hypertext Narratives 245 / Computer Games, Hypertext, and Narrative 250 / Digitizing the Movies: Interactive versus Multiplied Cinema 254 / Is Hypertext Fiction Possible? 264

7

Reconfiguring Literary Education

Threats and Promises 272 / Reconfiguring the Instructor 275 / Reconfiguring the Student 278 / Learning the Culture of a Discipline 280 / Nontraditional Students: Distant Learners and Readers outside Educational Institutions 281 / The Effects of Hypermedia in Teaching and Learning 284 / Reconfiguring Assignments and Methods of Evaluation 286 / A Hypertext Exercise 287 / Reconceiving Canon and Curriculum 292 / Creating the New Discursive Writing 302 / From Intermedia to the Web—Losses and Gains 309 / Answered Prayers, or the Academic Politics of Resistance 312 / What Chance Has Hypertext in Education? 313 / Getting the Paradigm Right 314

CONTENTS

8

The Politics of Hypertext: Who Controls the Text?

Can Hypertext Empower Anyone? Does Hypertext Have a Political Logic? 321 / The Marginalization of Technology and the Mystification of Literature 330 / The Politics of Particular Technologies 335 / Technology as Prosthesis 336 / The Political Vision of Hypertext; or, the Message in the Medium 343 / Hypertext and Postcolonial Literature, Criticism, and Theory 345 / Infotech, Empires, and Decolonization 347 / Hypertext as Paradigm for Postcoloniality 351 / Forms of Postcolonial Amnesia 354 / Hypertext as Paradigm in Postcolonial Theory 356 / The Politics of Access: Who Can Make Links, Who Decides What Is Linked? 358 / Slashdot: The Reader as Writer and Editor in a Multiuser Weblog 362 / Pornography, Gambling, and Law on the Internet—Vulnerability and Invulnerability in E-Space 364 / Access to the Text and the Author's Right (Copyright) 367 / Is the Hypertextual World of the Internet Anarchy or Big Brother's Realm? 376

Notes 377

Bibliography 399

Index 425