

Contents

Contributors	vii
1. Introduction: Cognitivism as an approach to cognition Alan Costall and Arthur Still	1
2. Mechanism and Romanticism: A selective history Arthur Still	7
3. On not-doing and on trying and failing Don Mixon	27
4. Frederic Bartlett and the rise of prehistoric psychology Alan Costall	39
5. The rhetorical-responsive nature of mind: A social constructionist account John Shotter	55
6. The concepts of the universal in the Cartesian and Hegelian frameworks Ivana Marková	81
7. Cognitivism: A phenomenological critique Neil Bolton	103
8. The contextualism that is behaviour analysis: An alternative to cognitive psychology Edward K. Morris	123
9. 'Graceful degradation': Cognitivism and the metaphors of the computer Alan Costall	151

10.	James Gibson's ecological approach to cognition Edward Reed	171
11.	Ecological realism and the fallacy of 'objectification' William Noble	199
12.	The mutual elimination of dualism in Vygotsky and Gibson Arthur Still and Alan Costall	225
13.	Alternative theoretical frameworks for psychology: A synopsis Benny Shanon	237
	Index	265