

TABLE OF CONTENTS

INTRODUCTION	11
A Forensic Approach to American Literary History?	14
Revisiting the “End” of American Literature	18
Outline of the Chapters	21
THE “PRE-HISTORY” OF AMERICAN LITERATURE: EARLY PROSPECTS (1850-1910)	25
The Future of an Illusion	27
Nationalizing the Past	30
The Rhetoric of Race	36
Teaching and Preaching	40
Why Textbooks (Never) Lie	44
The Taboo on Provincialism	49
LIVE AND LET LIVE: DEBATING CONTEMPORARY LITERATURE (1890-1930)	51
Explaining Antiquarianism	53
The Temptations of the Flesh	56
Culture and Scholarship	60
Explaining Anti-Antiquarianism	71
Historians of the Present	74
Facts and Factors	77
THE USES OF LANGUAGE: LITERARY POLYVOCALITY AND ETHNIC CONTINUITY (1880-1950)	85
Legends about Language in the U.S.	87
Dequarantining “American” Languages	90
The Continuation of “Anglocentrism continued”	93
The Languages of P(1)ur(al)ism	97
The Limits of Cosmopolitanism	104
America as a “Unipolar” Culture?	115

PRECURSORS AND EXEMPLARS:
GENEALOGIES IN AMERICAN LITERARY HISTORY	119
The Priority of Jonathan Edwards	121
Multiple Awakenings	125
The Dickinson Myth	127
How Dickinson Became an Intolerable Woman Author	134
The (Not So) Personal Voice: The Confessional Poets	139
The Matthew Effect	146
CONCLUSION:
NOTHING REALLY ENDS	153
ENDNOTES	161
WORKS CITED	183
INDEX	205