Contents

| Prej | face   | page x |
|------|--|--------|
|      | part one. Questions and answers                    |        |
| 1.   | Paths of Political Development                     | 1      |
|      | 1. Britain   | 2      |
|      | 2. Argentina                                       | 5      |
|      | 3. Singapore                                       | 5      |
|      | 4. South Africa                                    | 10     |
|      | 5. The Agenda                                      | 14     |
| 2.   | Our Argument                                       | 15     |
|      | 1. Democracy versus Nondemocracy                   | 16     |
|      | 2. Building Blocks of Our Approach                 | 19     |
|      | 3. Toward Our Basic Story                          | 22     |
|      | 4. Our Theory of Democratization                   | 23     |
|      | 5. Democratic Consolidation                        | 30     |
|      | 6. Determinants of Democracy                       | 31     |
|      | 7. Political Identities and the Nature of Conflict | 42     |
|      | 8. Democracy in a Picture                          | 43     |
|      | 9. Overview of the Book                            | 46     |
| 3.   | What Do We Know about Democracy?                   | 48     |
|      | 1. Measuring Democracy                             | 48     |
|      | 2. Patterns of Democracy                           | 51     |
|      | 3. Democracy, Inequality, and Redistribution       | 58     |
|      | 4. Crises and Democracy                            | 65     |
|      | 5. Social Unrest and Democratization               | 65     |
|      | 6. The Literature                                  | 75     |
|      | 7. Our Contribution                                | 80     |

viii Contents

PART TWO. MODELING POLITICS

| 4. | Democratic Politics   | 89          |
|----|---|-------------|
|    | 1. Introduction   | 89          |
|    | 2. Aggregating Individual Preferences                             | 91          |
|    | 3. Single-Peaked Preferences and the Median Voter Theorem         | 92          |
|    | 4. Our Workhorse Models   | 99          |
|    | 5. Democracy and Political Equality                               | 113         |
|    | 6. Conclusion   | 117         |
| 5. | Nondemocratic Politics  | 110         |
|    | 1. Introduction   | 118         |
|    | 2. Power and Constraints in Nondemocratic Politics                | 118         |
|    | 3. Modeling Preferences and Constraints in Nondemocracies         | 120128  |
|    | 4. Commitment Problems  | 120         |
|    | 5. A Simple Game of Promises                                      | 133         |
|    | 6. A Dynamic Model  | 151         |
|    | 7. Incentive-Compatible Promises                                  | 161         |
|    | 8. Conclusion   | 171         |
|    | DADE STANDARD COM   | 1,1         |
|    | PART THREE. THE CREATION AND CONSOLIDATION                        |             |
| _  | OF DEMOCRACY  |             |
| 6. | Democratization   | 173         |
|    | 1. Introduction   | 173         |
|    | 2. The Role of Political Institutions                             | 173         |
|    | 3. Preferences over Political Institutions                        | 176         |
|    | 4. Political Power and Institutions                               | 177         |
|    | 5. A Static Model of Democratization                              | 181         |
|    | 6. Democratization or Repression?                                 | 186         |
|    | 7. A Dynamic Model of Democratization                             | 193         |
|    | 8. Subgame Perfect Equilibria                                     | 201         |
|    | 9. Alternative Political Identities                               | 203         |
|    | 10. Targeted Transfers  | 207         |
|    | 11. Power of the Elites in Democracy                              | 207         |
|    | 12. Ideological Preferences over Regimes                          | 211         |
|    | 13. Democratization in a Picture                                  | 214         |
|    | 14. Equilibrium Revolutions                                       | 215         |
|    | 15. Conclusion  | 218         |
| 7. | Coups and Consolidation   | 221         |
|    | 1. Introduction   | 221         |
|    | 2. Incentives for Coups   | 221         |
|    | 3. A Static Model of Coups  | 225         |
|    | 4. A Dynamic Model of the Creation and Consolidation of Democracy | 223         |
|    | 5. Alternative Political Identities                               | 231         |
|    | 6. Targeted Transfers   | 246246  |
|    | -   | 4 40 |

| Contents | ix |
|----------|----|
| Contents | 1X |

358

|     | 7. Power in Democracy and Coups                                    | 247 |
|-----|--|-----|
|     | 8. Consolidation in a Picture                                      | 249 |
|     | 9. Defensive Coups   | 251 |
|     | 10. Conclusion   | 253 |
|     | PART FOUR. PUTTING THE MODELS TO WORK                              |     |
| 8.  | The Role of the Middle Class                                       | 255 |
|     | 1. Introduction  | 255 |
|     | 2. The Three-Class Model   | 259 |
|     | 3. Emergence of Partial Democracy                                  | 262 |
|     | 4. From Partial to Full Democracy                                  | 267 |
|     | 5. Repression: The Middle Class as a Buffer                        | 273 |
|     | 6. Repression: Softliners versus Hardliners                        | 278 |
|     | 7. The Role of the Middle Class in Consolidating Democracy         | 283 |
|     | 8. Conclusion  | 285 |
| 9.  | Economic Structure and Democracy                                   | 287 |
|     | 1. Introduction  | 287 |
|     | 2. Economic Structure and Income Distribution                      | 290 |
|     | 3. Political Conflict  | 292 |
|     | 4. Capital, Land, and the Transition to Democracy                  | 293 |
|     | 5. Costs of Coup on Capital and Land                               | 296 |
|     | 6. Capital, Land, and the Burden of Democracy                      | 300 |
|     | 7. Conflict between Landowners and Industrialists                  | 30  |
|     | 8. Industrialists, Landowners, and Democracy in Practice           | 312 |
|     | 9. Economic Institutions   | 313 |
|     | 10. Human Capital  | 310 |
|     | 11. Conjectures about Political Development                        | 31  |
|     | 12. Conclusion   | 319 |
| 10. | Globalization and Democracy  | 32  |
|     | 1. Introduction  | 32  |
|     | 2. A Model of an Open Economy                                      | 32  |
|     | 3. Political Conflict – Democratic Consolidation                   | 33  |
|     | 4. Political Conflict – Transition to Democracy                    | 33  |
|     | 5. Financial Integration   | 33  |
|     | 6. Increased Political Integration                                 | 34  |
|     | 7. Alternative Assumptions about the Nature of International Trade | 34  |
|     | 8. Conclusion  | 34  |
|     | PART FIVE. CONCLUSIONS AND THE FUTURE OF DEMOCRACY                 |     |
| 11. | Conclusions and the Future of Democracy                            | 34  |
|     | 1. Paths of Political Development Revisited                        | 34  |
|     | 2. Extensions and Areas for Future Research                        | 35  |

3. The Future of Democracy

PART SIX, APPENDIX

| 14. | Appendix to Chapter 4. The Distribution of Fower in Democracy |
|-----|---|
|     | 1. Introduction   |
|     | 2. Probabilistic Voting Models                                |
|     | 3. Lobbying   |
|     | 4. Partisan Politics and Political Capture                    |
| Bib | liography   |
| Ind | ex  |

Amondiy to Chanter 4. The Distribution of Dayyar in Damagra