

Contents

Preface	vii
Acknowledgements	xiii
1 The ontogenesis of individual consciousness as a scientific problem	1
The fundamental structures of consciousness	4
The spheres of the reality of consciousness	8
The levels of behaviour and the planes of representing reality	12
The properties and functions of the spheres of reality of consciousness	15
The structure of everyday reality	17
Unusual reality: Its structure and types	23
Spontaneous unusual reality	24
Unspontaneous unusual reality	27
Existentialization as the work of consciousness	29
The study of existentialization in children	32
Aims of the research	39
2 The development of the stable object concept in ontogenesis	42
The development of object permanence in childhood	44
The development of object permanence in adulthood	55
Concluding remarks	76

3	The ontogenesis of the causality notion	79
	The 'natural' and 'animistic' modes of assimilation of reality in children	84
	Phenomenalistic and physical causality in the preschooler's mind: a struggle for dominance	96
	Studies with older children and adults	105
	Conclusions	109
4	The development of the notions of space and time in a child	112
	The experimental study of understanding of certain fundamental structures of space and time in preschoolers	117
	Conclusions	123
5	Individual consciousness as a system of realities	126
	Bibliography	146
	Subject Index	155
	Name Index	160