

Contents

Emotions in Personality and Psychopathology: An Introduction

Carroll E. Izard	1
------------------------	---

PART I

MOODS, TRAITS, AND DEFENSE MECHANISMS

Chapter 1

Editor's Introduction	11
-----------------------------	----

Affect and Imagination in Play and Fantasy	13
---	----

Jerome L. Singer

I. The Meaning and Functions of Imaginative Play	14
(A) Examples of Imaginative Play • (B) The Role of Make-Believe Play in Early Childhood • (C) Affects and Imagination in Early Childhood
II. Theoretical Relationships between Affect and Imagination	20
(A) Cognitive Assimilation and Differentiated Affects • (B) Thought and Affect Regulation • (C) Fantasy in Child's Play
III. Research Approaches to Studying Imagination	24
(A) Projective Techniques • (B) Observations of Spontaneous Play • (C) Intervention Procedures
IV. Some Recent Research Findings with Preschoolers	27
V. Some Implications for Theory and Research	31
References	32

Chapter 2
Editor's Introduction	35
Humor and Psychopathology	37
Jacob Levine
I. Humorous Behavior and Its Psychopathology	39
(A) Early Disturbances of Smiling and Laughing • (B) Failures in Humor Appreciation • (C) The Cognitive Component of the Humor Response • (D) The Affective Component • (E) Comic Action and Its Psychopathology
II. Humor in Specific Psychopathological States	51
(A) General Considerations • (B) Organic States—Involuntary Laughter • (C) Humor and Schizophrenia • (D) Humor and Depression
III. Conclusion	66
References	66
Chapter 3
Editor's Introduction	71
Moods: Their Personal Dynamics and Significance	73
Alden E. Wessman
I. Introduction	73
II. The Nature and Significance of Affect	74
III. Approaches to the Understanding of Moods	75
(A) Moods as Dimensions of Behavioral Change • (B) Moods as Cognitive–Affective Interactions • (C) Moods as Subjective Experience • (D) Moods as Psychodynamic Changes • (E) Some Shared Perspectives and Their Implications
IV. Aims and Methods in Studies of Mood and Personality	84
(A) The Setting of Our Initial Studies • (B) Research Aims and Strategies • (C) The Personal Feeling Scales (PFS)
V. Changes in Normal Elation and Depression	88
(A) Changes in Self and Ideal Concepts • (B) Changes in Hostility and Responses to Frustration
VI. Level and Variability of Elation–Depression Reports over Extended Periods	91
(A) Hedonic Level and Variability • (B) Independence of Hedonic Level and Variability • (C) Absence of Regularity and Rhythm in Normal Mood Records • (D) Elation–Depression as a Major Dimension of Mood
VII. Individual Patterns of Affective Covariation	93
VIII. Personality Characteristics of the Happy and the Unhappy	94
IX. Personality Characteristics of the Stable and the Variable in Mood	96
X. Conclusion	98
References	98

Chapter 4

Editor's Introduction 103

The Meaning and Measurement of Guilt 105

Donald L. Mosher

 I. Introduction 105

 (A) A Construct Validational Approach • (B) The Meaning of Guilt • (C) The Measurement of Guilt

 II. Evidence of Construct Validity 109

 (A) Guilt and Behavioral Inhibition • (B) Behavioral Inhibition in the Laboratory • (C) Guilt and Moral Judgment • (D) Guilt as Personality Disposition and as Affect • (E) Guilt and Physiological Indices of Arousal

 III. Progress and Prospect 122

 (A) Successful Construct Validation • (B) Limitations of the Inventories and the Construct Validational Approach • (C) Future Research on Guilt

 References 124

Chapter 5

Editor's Introduction 131

The Personal and Social Dynamics of Shyness 133

Paul A. Pilkonis and Philip G. Zimbardo

 I. The Phenomenon of Shyness 134

 II. Stanford Shyness Survey 137

 III. Situations and Attributions 140

 IV. Public versus Private Shyness 142

 V. Shyness and Assorted Pathologies 150

 (A) Political and Social Control • (B) Alcoholism • (C) Irrational Violence: Sudden Murderers • (D) Sexual Dysfunction

 VI. Shyness across Cultures 154

 VII. Treatment Implications 155

 References 158

Chapter 6

Editor's Introduction 161

Sensation Seeking and Risk Taking 163

Marvin Zuckerman

 I. Theoretical Background 163

 (A) Theoretical Links with Psychopathology • (B) Development of the Sensation Seeking Scales (SSS) • (C) Sensation Seeking as an Emotional State • (D) Risk •

(E) Sensation Seeking in Normals • (F) Development of State Scales for Sensation Seeking • (G) The Relation between Novelty and Risk • (H) Relationships between Risk Appraisal, Sensation-Seeking Trait, and Eysenck Dimensions • (I) State Responses to Hypothetical Situations
II. Sensation Seeking and Psychopathology	179
(A) Psychopathic Personality and Delinquency • (B) Drug Abusers • (C) Mania • (D) Schizophrenia • (E) Phobias
III. A Biological Theory of Sensation Seeking	191
References	193
 Chapter 7
Editor's Introduction	199
The Appetite Hypothesis of Emotions: A New Psychoanalytic Model of Motivation	201
Hartvig Dahl
I. Introduction	201
II. Classification	202
III. Definition of a Wish	205
IV. Three Components of Emotions	209
V. General Characteristics of Appetites	211
VI. Emotions as Appetites and Messages	213
VII. Some Clinical Implications	216
VIII. Some Social Implications	219
IX. Phylogenetic Speculations	220
X. Conclusion	222
References	223
 Chapter 8
Editor's Introduction	227
A Structural Theory of Ego Defenses and Emotions	229
Robert Plutchik, Henry Kellerman, and Hope R. Conte
I. Defining and Measuring Ego Defenses	229
(A) Variations in the Concept of Ego Defenses • (B) Attempts to Measure Defense Mechanisms • (C) Development of an Initial Model • (D) Constructing an Ego Defense Scale: Rationale
II. Study I: Development of a Preliminary Self-Report Defense Mechanisms Test	237
III. Study II: Clinicians' Conceptions of Ego Defenses in Relation to Diagnoses	239

IV. Study III: A Factor Analysis of Correlations among Defense Mechanism Scales 240

V. Study IV: Clinicians' Ratings of the Appropriateness of Items 241

VI. Study V: Ratings of Developmental Level of Ego Defenses 243

VII. Study VI: A Comparison of Schizophrenics and Normals on the Life Style Index 244

VIII. Study VII: Ego Defenses in Relation to Self-Esteem and Anxiety .. 246

IX. Study VIII: Similarity Ratings of Defense Mechanisms: A Direct Estimation Method..... 247

X. Study IX: Similarity Ratings of Defense Mechanisms: A Semantic Differential Comparison 250

XI. A Theoretical Model for Defense Mechanisms 251

XII. Conclusion..... 254

References 255

PART II
PAIN, ANXIETY, GRIEF, AND DEPRESSION

Chapter 9

Editor's Introduction 261

Emotion, Pain, and Physical Illness 263

Howard Leventhal and Deborah Everhart

I. The Role of Emotion in Pain and Illness 264

II. Models of Pain and Emotion..... 264

(A) Sensory Model of Pain • (B) Sequential Components (Sensation and Emotion) Model • (C) A Parallel Processing Model of Pain Distress

III. Applications to Distress Reduction during Medical Treatment 291

IV. Conclusion 293

References 294

Chapter 10

Editor's Introduction..... 301

A Neuropsychological Theory of Anxiety 303

J. A. Gray

I. Learning Theory Background 304

II. The Behavioral Effects of Antianxiety Drugs 307

(A) Punishment • (B) Frustrative Nonreward

III. The Psychology of Anxiety	312
IV. The Septohippocampal System	315
V. The Partial Reinforcement Extinction Effect	319
VI. The Septohippocampal System and the Partial Reinforcement Extinction Effect	321
VII. The Dorsal Ascending Noradrenergic Bundle	326
VIII. Conclusion	330
References	331

Chapter 11

Editor's Introduction	337
The Functions of Grief	339
James R. Averill
I. The Nature of Grief	341
(A) The Syndrome of Grief
II. Biological Contributions to the Syndrome of Grief	343
(A) The Phylogeny of Grief • (B) The Universality of Grief • (C) Biological Functions of Grief
III. Psychological Contributions to the Syndrome of Grief	350
(A) Extinction • (B) Learned Helplessness • (C) The Interruption of Behavior • (D) The Psychological Functions of Grief
IV. Social Contributions to the Syndrome of Grief	360
(A) The Social Functions of Grief and Mourning
V. Concluding Observations	364
References	365

Chapter 12

Editor's Introduction	369
Shame in Depression and Hysteria	371
Helen Block Lewis
I. Reasons for the Neglect of the Phenomenology of Shame and Guilt	371
(A) The Distinction between the Self and the Ego • (B) The Nature of Human Nature • (C) Shame and a Theory of Sex Differences
II. Distinctions between Shame and Guilt	380
(A) Difficulties in Recognizing One's Psychological State: Shame and Guilt Are Often Fused and Therefore Confused • (B) The Stimulus to Shame Is Twofold: Moral and "Nonmoral" Shame • (C) Difficulties in the Functioning of the Self in

Shame and Guilt • (D) Difficulties in Discharging Hostility in Shame and Guilt: Shame–Rage, Which Originates about the Self, Is Discharged upon the Self

- III. Evidence for a Connection between Shame and Depression 387
 - (A) Phenomenological Similarity between Shame and Depression/Hysterias •
 - (B) Field Dependence and Depression/Hysterias
- IV. Sex Differences in Shame and in Depression/Hysterias 389
 - (A) Sex Differences in Proneness to Shame • (B) Sex Differences in Proneness to Depression • (C) Sex Differences in Proneness to the Hysterias
- References 393

Chapter 13

- Editor’s Introduction 397
- Guilt in Obsession and Paranoia 399
- Helen Block Lewis
 - I. The Role of Guilt in Mental Illness 399
 - II. The Phenomenology of Guilt 403
 - (A) Oedipus the King • (B) Hamlet • (C) The Iceman Cometh
 - III. Guilt and Obsessive-Compulsive Disorders 405
 - (A) Freud’s Case of the Rat-Man • (B) Excerpts from Psychotherapy Sessions
 - IV. Field Independence, Sex, Guilt, and Mental Illness 411
 - References 413

Chapter 14

- Editor’s Introduction 415
- Cognitive–Affective Processes in Depression 417
- Maria Kovacs and Aaron T. Beck
 - I. The Phenomenology of Depression 417
 - II. The Cognitive View of Depression 419
 - III. Cognition and Cognitive Processes 420
 - IV. Affect and Affective Processes 422
 - V. Cognition and Affect in Depression 424
 - (A) Thematic Content of the Cognitions • (B) Time Perspective • (C) Selective Recall • (D) Idiosyncratic Meaning • (E) Characteristic Errors in Thought • (F) Depressogenic Premises and Schemata
 - VI. Clinical Implications of the Cognitive View of Depression 437
 - References 439

PART III
EMOTION AWARENESS, EXPRESSION, AND AROUSAL

Chapter 15

Editor's Introduction	445
Emotion Expressions and Personality Integration in Infancy	447
Carroll E. Izard and Sandra Buechler
I. The Ontogenesis of Emotion Expressions	451
(A) The Differentiation Hypothesis • (B) The Discrete Systems Hypothesis •
(C) Research Relating to Expression Ontogeny
II. Factors Affecting the Development of the Emotion System and
Personality Integration	455
(A) Environment and Social Class • (B) Temperament • (C) Mother-Infant
Interactions and Caregiving
III. Emotions, Cognitive Attainments, and Personality Integration	462
(A) Emotion Expressions and Specific Cognitive Attainments • (B) Emotion
Expressions and Overall Social and Mental Development • (C) Infant Emotions and Infant Well-Being
IV. Summary	465
References	466

Chapter 16

Editor's Introduction	473
Emotion Awareness and Antisocial Behavior	475
Jeffrey C. Savitsky and Thomas Eby
I. The Nature of Emotion Awareness	477
II. The Impact of Emotion Displays	481
III. Emotion Awareness as an Individual Difference	484
(A) Accuracy of Classification • (B) Importance of Emotion Displays •
(C) Interpersonal Reactions
IV. Summary and Conclusions	488
References	490

Chapter 17

Editor's Introduction	493
Nonlinguistic Vocal Indicators of Emotion and Psychopathology	495
Klaus R. Scherer
I. Evolutionary Continuities in the Vocal Expression of Emotion	495
II. Effects of Emotion on the Processes of Voice Production	498

III. Vocal Indicators of Nonspecific Arousal 504
 IV. Vocal Indicators of Discrete Emotions 508
 V. Vocal Indicators of Affective Disturbances in Psychopathology 516
 VI. Epilogue 523
 References 524

Chapter 18

Editor's Introduction 531
Gaze Patterns of Normals and Schizophrenics Retelling Happy, Sad, and Angry Experiences 533
 Ralph V. Exline, Alfonso Paredes, Edward G. Gottheil, and Richard Winkelmayer
 I. Introduction 533
 II. Study 1: Interrelations among Behavioral and Cognitive Indicators of Closeness and Their Effect upon Accurate Discrimination of Anger, Sorrow, and Joy 534
 (A) Method • (B) Results
 III. Study 2: Gaze Direction as a Factor in the Judgment of Normal and Schizophrenic Nonverbal Expressions of Affect 541
 (A) Method • (B) Results
 IV. Discussion 554
 References 559

Chapter 19

Editor's Introduction 563
The Emotional Consequences of Arousal Without Reason 565
 Christina Maslach
 I. Critique of the Schachter and Singer Study 566
 (A) Empirical Issues • (B) Methodological Issues
 II. Failure of an Exact Replication 568
 III. Alternative Views 569
 (A) Negative Biasing • (B) An Expanded Search
 IV. Current Study 572
 (A) Unexplained Physiological Arousal • (B) Cognitive Factors • (C) Dependent Measures • (D) Hypotheses
 V. Method 574
 (A) Subjects
 VI. Results 477
 (A) Physiological Arousal • (B) Perception of Confederate • (C) Overt Emotional Behavior • (D) Reported Emotional Experience • (E) Attribution of Causality • (F) Comparison of Arousal Control Groups

VII. Discussion	582
(A) Social Influences on Emotion • (B) Unexplained Arousal and Emotional Pathology
VIII. Conclusion	588
References	588
Index	591