

Prologue	5
1 Reading Plays and Drama: Basic Guidelines	7
1 Why Study Drama?	7
2 A Script to Be Performed: Drama as Text and in the Theatre	10
3 Some Guidelines for the Study of Drama	14
4 Where Do We Go from Here? – A Brief Outline of the Structure of the Present Volume	18
2 Origins and Genres of Drama	20
1 Characteristics and a Basic Definition of Drama	20
2 Origins of Drama: Rituals and Dionysia	22
3 Dramatic Genres and Classifications of Dramatic Texts	23
4 Features of Tragic Drama	26
5 Features of Comic Drama	29
6 Minor Genres of Drama	34
7 The Power and Knowledge of Drama	36
8 Social and Political Dimensions of Drama	39
3 Semiotic Systems and Communication in Drama	44
1 The Semiotics of Drama	44
2 Non-verbal Devices in Dramatic Texts	51
3 Codes of Communication	55
4 A Communication Model for Dramatic Texts and Performance	58
5 The Transmission of Information	62
6 Perspective Structure in Drama	66
7 Epic Forms of Communication	68
8 Theory into Practice: Analysing Communication in Drama	71
4 Categories for the Analysis of Dramatic Language	76
1 Special Features of Dramatic Language	76
2 Functions of Dramatic Language in the Communication Situation of Drama	79
3 Categories for the Analysis of Dramatic Dialogue	82
4 Categories for the Analysis of Dramatic Monologue	87
5 Dialogue and Monologue: Contrasts and Correspondences	89
6 Prose and Verse Drama	90
7 How to Do Things with Words : Performative Language	92
8 Theory into Practice: Analysing Dramatic Speech	94
5 Categories for the Analysis of Dramatic Characters	100
1 Theories of ‘Character’ and Characterisation	100
2 Character Types and Modes of Individualisation	103
3 Development of Character – An Overview	106

4	Techniques of Characterisation	109
5	Theory into Practice: Analysing Dramatic Characters	113
6	Categories for the Analysis of Dramatic Action	117
1	Characteristics of Dramatic Action	117
2	Characteristics for the Analysis of Dramatic Plot	119
3	Open vs. Closed Forms of Drama	125
4	Subplots, Episodes and Play-within-Plays	127
5	Dramatic Openings and Closures	130
6	Theory into Practice: Analysing Dramatic Action	133
7	Categories for the Analysis of Space and Time	138
1	The Relation of Place and Time	138
2	Open and Closed Structures of Dramatic Space and Time	139
3	Categories for the Analysis of Space	140
4	Categories for the Analysis of Time	144
5	Theory into Practice: Analysing Space and Time	147
8	Theatrical Space, Actors, and Audiences	151
1	Theatre Space: Architecture and Stage Design – An Overview	151
2	Performance Theatre and Theatre(s) of Cruelty	161
3	Actors and Styles of Acting	163
4	Audience: Expectation, Control and Response	168
5	Breaking the Fourth Wall: Metatheatre	170
	Epilogue	173
	Bibliography	176
	Primary Works Cited	176
	Introductions to the Study of Drama & Reference Works	177
	Works on Drama Theory and the Analysis of Dramatic Texts	178
	Histories of Theatre & Drama	182
	Useful Periodicals/Journals	183
	Useful Websites	183
	On Writing Academic Essays	184